Arkheologiia Sibiri:

Bulletin, 1950 Prehistoric Hunter-Gatherers of the Baikal Region, Siberia Andrzej W. Weber, M. Anne Katzenberg, Theodore G. Schurr, 2011-05-26 Siberia's Lake Baikal region is an archaeologically unique and emerging area of hunter-gatherer research offering insights into the complexity, variability, and dynamics of long-term culture change. The exceptional quality of archaeological materials recovered there facilitates interdisciplinary studies whose relevance extends far beyond the region. The Baikal Archaeology Project, one of the most comprehensive studies ever conducted in the history of subarctic archaeology, is conducted by an international multidisciplinary team studying Middle Holocene (about 9,000 to 3,000 years B.P.) hunter-gatherers of the region. Funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the project includes scholars in archaeology, physical anthropology, ethnography, molecular biology, geophysics, geochemistry, and paleoenvironmental studies. This book presents the current team's research findings on questions about long-term patterns of hunter-gatherer adaptive strategies. Grounded in interdisciplinary approaches to primary research questions of cultural change and continuity over 6,000 years, the project utilizes advanced research methods and integrates diverse lines of evidence in making fundamental and lasting contributions to hunter-gatherer archaeology. Indigenous Archaeology in Two Hemispheres Lisa Rankin, Oscar Moro Abadía, Emilie Dotte-Sarout, 2026-03-16 Indigenous Archaeology in Two Hemispheres: Approaches to Inuit and First Nations Past in Canada, Australia, and Greenland examines the history and current experiences of Inuit and Australian First Nations peoples in archaeology. The book explores recent work by Australian, Canadian, and Greenlandic scholars and community partners in a context marked by globalization. This cross-national interdisciplinary approach enriches the research with Indigenous voices from the Eastern Arctic and Australia, aiding the exploration of the similarities and differences in Inuit and First Nations peoples' historical experiences and the challenges they face currently. Chapters call into question the traditional frameworks that have shaped research on the past of Indigenous people in these regions: frameworks that promote imbalanced power relationships and endorse a collaborative agenda that rejects the objectification of other worldviews and alterities. The book is organized around four main themes: historical approaches, current challenges to Inuit and First Nations archaeology, data sovereignty, and Indigenous perspectives. The book will be of interest to students and researchers in archaeology, anthropology, history, art history, the history of science, and cultural heritage management.
