

"A sense of impending movement"

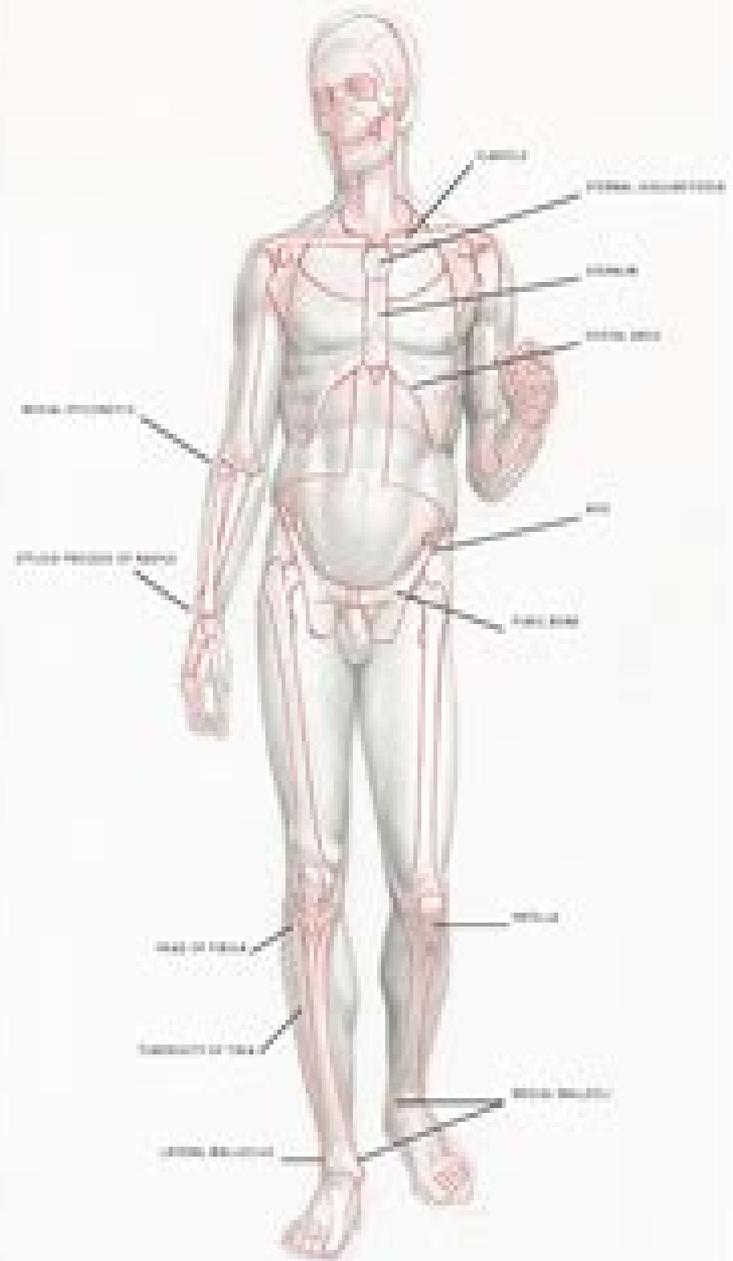

DISSECTING THE DORYPHOROS

The Doryphoros, or Spice Boy, exhibits the proportional canon established by the Classical Greek sculptor Polykleitos in the 5th century BCE. The figure is depicted doing a choreia, a free, but strict, dance step, sculpted in marble canon. The Doryphoros' composition gives an account of idealized anatomy, creating a sense of impending movement and balance, and function of life.

All the essential skeletal and soft tissue marks are properly positioned on the Doryphoros, creating the artist's ideal proportioning of skeletal structure and muscular skeletal connections. Following these landmarks, it is possible to reconstruct the features of the Spice Boy, as shown HERE. Although idealized as a "type" and somewhat general of their respective aspects, the figure's muscular form is correctly synthesized and properly positioned on the skeleton. One can speculate that the manipulation of proportion and structural forms helped maintain canon without canon and a high level of quality in the production of the last other Classical artworks.
