

"A sense of impending movement"

DISSECTING THE DORYPHOROS

The Doryphoros, or Spun Discus, exhibits the proportional canon established by the Classical Greek sculptor Polykleitos in the fifth century BCE. The figure is depicted doing a diskos throw, a feat for which Pheidias copied, sculpted in marble, ca. 450 BCE. The Doryphoros' composition gives an account of idealized anatomy, creating a sense of impending movement and balance, and harmony of life.

All the essential skeletal and soft tissue marks are properly positioned on the Doryphoros, creating the artist's ideal proportioning of skeletal structure and muscular skeletal connections. Following these landmarks, it is possible to reconstruct the features of the Spun Discus, as shown FIGURE 10.15. Although idealized as a "type" and somewhat general of their respective aspects, the figure's muscular form is correctly synthesized and properly positioned on the skeleton. One can speculate that the manipulation of proportion and anatomical forms helped maintain canon without canon and a high level of quality in the production of the last other Classical artworks.
