The Arming of Europe and the Making of the First World War David G. Herrmann, 1997-03-23 Europe's adoption of new 20th century weaponry increased its land based military power and influenced international affairs during the series of diplomatic crises that led to the First World War Historian David Herrmann draws on documentary research in military and state archives in Germany France Austria England and Italy to provide the most complete study of this subject to date Illus

The Making of the West, Combined Version (Volumes I & II) Lynn Hunt, 2009 The Making of the West offers a geographically and culturally expansive conception of the West that prepares students to understand today's globalized world Its integrated chronological narrative makes the impact of historical developments clear by highlighting the interconnections among the politics people and ideas of a specific period From the book's conception the authors a team of renowned scholars and expert teachers have worked to provide a new vision of the West based on cutting edge scholarship The narrative enhanced by a rich and informative art and map program distills the latest research and consistently treats topics underserved in other books the West in global perspective high and popular art and culture and gender The Struggle for Recognition in International Relations Michelle K. Murray, 2019 How established powers can facilitate the peaceful rise of new great powers is a perennial question of international relations and has gained increased salience with the emergence of China as an economic and military rival of the United States Highlighting the social dynamics of power transitions The Struggle for Recognition in International Relations offers a powerful new framework through which to understand important historical cases of power transition and more recently the rise of China and how the United States can facilitate its peaceful rise International Politics of Recognition Thomas Lindemann, Erik Ringmar, 2015-11-17 The origins of international conflict are often explained by security dilemmas power rivalries or profits for political or economic elites Common to these approaches is the idea that human behaviour is mostly governed by material interests which principally involve the quest for power or wealth The authors question this truncated image of human rationality Borrowing the concept of recognition from models developed in philosophy and sociology this book provides a unique set of applications to the problems of international conflict and argues that human actions are often not motivated by a pursuit of utility maximisation as much as they are by a quest to gain recognition This unique approach will be a welcome alternative to the traditional models of international conflict Journal of American Culture, 1999 Canadian Periodical Index, 1996 Bruce's History Lessons - the Second Five Years (2006 - 2011) Bruce G.
