Butterfly Chronicles Helen Lewison,2005-03-21 Butterflies are fragile and almost defenseless creatures but rely on a variety of strategy to protect them blending into their environment so well it is almost impossible to detect them I learned about pain and loss but my ability to take wing became my major defense My father an intellectual arrived as a young man from Austria with a portfolio of plays poetry and short stories He spent his life in search of a dream to become a great writer that did not materialize My quiet small mother was born in a small village in Hungary and she gave me the freedom to explore the world Her warmth was my mainstay In her eyes I could do no wrong My silent melancholy father rarely talked I grew up in h a home where conversation was restrained and I found myself doing all the talking It became norm but I desperately needed to hear a sound even if it was only coming from my own lips My brother Morton was an intelligent composed gray eyed boy who also had a dream but death at the age of fourteen killed the dream and left me to grow up alone and lonely I remember visiting Morton in the hospital as he lay foaming at the mouth in a coma My life was never again the same I was ten years old I was friendly but had no real friends I was lonely but did not spend much time alone The beginning of my life was with no road map no directions only following the scent of excitement adventure and love Watching a butterfly zigzag aimlessly across the meadow on a sunny morning it could easily be taken for natures most carefree vagabond unhurried unburdened and even a little ditzy But butterflies are purposeful aggressive sexually driven and smarter than most people think When I was very little somebody asked me what I wanted to be when I grow up I answered quiet emphatically I want to be a dancing girl Where it was luck chance or karma one way or the other I did become a dancing girl dancing literally and metaphorically through life Oh how love played an extraordinary role in my life I will always remember love the highs the lows the pleasure the pain and ultimately the wonderment Like the butterflies that use their sense of sight touch hearing smell and taste to survive in the world Flying is a major defense of butterflies I soon stretched out my wings and my journey began
