Bad News, Good News Douglas W. Maynard, 2003-05 When we share or receive good or bad news from ordinary events such as the birth of a child to public catastrophes such as 9 11 our old lives come to an end and suddenly we enter a new world In Bad News Good News Douglas W Maynard explores how we tell and hear such news and what s similar and different about our social experiences when the tidings are bad rather than good or vice versa Uncovering vocal and nonvocal patterns in everyday conversations clinics and other organizations Maynard shows practices by which people give and receive good or bad news how they come to realize the news and their new world how they suppress or express their emotions and how they construct social relationships through the sharing of news He also reveals the implications of his study for understanding public affairs in which transmitting news may influence society at large and he provides recommendations for professionals and others on how to deliver bad or good tidings more effectively For anyone who wants to understand the interactional facets of news delivery and receipt and their social implications Bad News Good News offers a wealth of scholarly insights and practical advice

New York Magazine, 1971-12-06 New York Magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country With award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea The Conservator, 1911 Bad News Rob Brotherton, 2020-05-14 From the bestselling author of Suspicious Minds There was a time when the news came once a day in the morning newspaper A time when the only way to see what was happening around the world was to catch the latest newsreel at the movies Times have changed Now we're inundated The news is no longer confined to a radio in the living room or to a nightly half hour timeslot on the television Pundits pontificate on news networks 24 hours a day We carry the news with us getting instant alerts about events around the globe Yet despite this unprecedented abundance of information it seems increasingly difficult to know what's true and what's not In Bad News Rob Brotherton delves into the psychology of news reviewing how the latest research can help navigate this supposedly post truth world Which buzzwords describe psychological reality and which are empty sound bites How much of this news is unprecedented and how much is business as usual Are we doomed to fall for fake news or is fake news fake news There has been considerable psychological research into the fundamental questions underlying this phenomenon How do we form our beliefs and why do we end up believing things that are wrong How much information can we possibly process and what is the internet doing to our attention spans Ultimately this book answers one of the greatest questions of the age how can we all be smarter consumers of news Bad News Robert Shogan, 2001-03-13 As the 2000 presidential campaign has once again demonstrated political journalism is an intrusive and nettlesome trade More important it is freighted with power power to do good and also harm But how much of power is real and how much mere perception Prize winning reporter Robert Shogan draws on the lessons of seven presidential elections to answer these questions in Bad News He shows how amidst the upheavals of the 1960s the press emerged as what many believed was the new dominant force in presidential politics But as reporters moved into the power vacuum created by the demise of party vitality and the authority of the political bosses they soon found themselves serving mainly as the instruments of a new political ruling class The media Mr Shogan argues now play the role of enablers Without fully realizing it they allow and abet the abuse of the political process by the candidates and their handlers Bad News targets not only the machinations of the competing campaigns but the innate weaknesses and limitations of the press corps with special attention to the 2000 election Too often journalists myself included Mr Shogan writes have been unwilling to learn what they do not know and to make the information they possess relevant and important to their audiences Too many of us eager for attention have been too willing to create stories that are larger than life and reality and too impressed with our own importance to benefit from the criticism leveled against our work Rejecting conventional non solutions leavened by wit and enriched by firsthand reportage Bad News pierces the fog of pretense and hypocrisy that clouds the turbulent partnership of press and politicians It provides voters with what they most need a manual of self defense against the excesses and distortions of presidential politics New Bad
