Back Door to War Charles Callan Tansill, 1952 Behandler baggrunden for USA s indtr den i 2 verdenskrig Back Door to War Charles Tansill, 2014-07-14 COMPLETELY RESET AND REFORMATTED Charles Callan Tansill one of the foremost American diplomatic historians of the twentieth century convincingly argues that Franklin Roosevelt wished to involve the United States in the European War that began in September 1939 When his efforts appeared to come to naught Roosevelt determined to provoke Japan into an attack on American territory Doing so would involve Japan s Axis allies in war also and so America would thus enter the war through the back door The strategy succeeded and Tansill maintains that Roosevelt therefore welcomed Japan s attack on Pearl Harbor Tansill demonstrates quite convincingly his central theme that FDR sought to include the United States in the Second World War on the side of the Soviet Union from the very beginning and duped the Japanese into firing the first shot Tansill faulted Roosevelt accusing him of pressuring Neville Chamberlain to fight Hitler of increasingly involving America in Britain s war effort of trying to provoke Hitler into attacking American warships in the Atlantic and by escalating economic and diplomatic pressure of maneuvering the Japanese into attacking Pearl Harbor Tansill proves his premise by the usage of extensive primary material from US State Department files current periodicals and sound reasoning The North American Review's War Weekly George Brinton McClellan Harvey, 1918 Civil War Petersburg A. Wilson Greene, 2006 Few wartime cities in Virginia held more importance than Petersburg Nonetheless the city has until now lacked an adequate military history let alone a history of the civilian home front The noted Civil War historian A Wilson Greene now provides an expertly researched eloquently written study of the city that was second only to Richmond in size and strategic significance Industrial commercial and extremely prosperous Petersburg was also home to a large African American community including the state s highest percentage of free blacks On the eve of the Civil War the city elected a conservative pro Union approach to the sectional crisis Little more than a month before Virginia s secession did Petersburg finally express pro Confederate sentiments at which point the city threw itself wholeheartedly into the effort with large numbers of both white and black men serving Over the next four years Petersburg s citizens watched their once beautiful city become first a conduit for transient soldiers from the Deep South then an armed camp and finally the focus of one of the Civil War s most protracted and damaging campaigns The fall of Richmond and collapse of the Confederate war effort in Virginia followed close on Grant s ultimate success in Petersburg At war s end Petersburg s antebellum prosperity evaporated under pressures from inflation chronic shortages and the extensive damage done by Union artillery shells Greene s book tracks both Petersburg s civilian experience and the city s place in Confederate military strategy and administration Employing scores of unpublished sources the book weaves a uniquely personal story of thousands of citizens free blacks slaves and their holders factory owners merchants all of whom shared a singular experience in Civil War Virginia North American Review's War Weekly George Brinton McClellan Harvey, 1918 Our War Too Margaret Paton-Walsh, 2002 In the late 1930s

a number of American women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation's entry into World War II. While their story is fairly well known, Margaret Paton Walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that American intervention was absolutely necessary. Paton Walsh recounts how the United States became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of American women who faced it as a necessary evil. Covering the period between 1935 and 1941, she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women's organizations, informal women's networks, and even male-dominated lobbying groups. In the Great Debate over whether America should enter the war, some women favored aid to the Allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct U.S. involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a Nazi victory. Paton Walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day. Elizabeth Cutter Morrow, whose son-in-law Charles Lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman, supported the revision of the Neutrality Acts to allow the sale of arms to the Allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast. Soon other women joined this debate. Esther Brunauer of the AAUW, journalist Dorothy Thompson, and organizations like the League of Women Voters and National Women's Trade Union League broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate American aid for the Allied cause. Focusing on the conflict in Europe, Paton Walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the Lend Lease program for America's entry into the war but supported it nevertheless. By late 1941, the Women's Division of the Fight for Freedom Committee had been established, no longer merely advocating aid to Britain to keep American boys out of battle; this organization supported direct American involvement in the war as a means of stopping Nazi oppression. While most historians have focused on women's pacifism, Paton Walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs. Our War Too is a story of American women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace. It expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on American public opinion over the build-up to the war.
