ABSTRACT

Learning style is the way in which learners characteristically prefer to learn. In spite of teachers' less accommodation of different learning styles, mismatches often occur between the students' learning style differences and instructional methods employed by teachers. This results less learning and misbehaving. This paper defined several dimensions of learning thought to particularly relevant to foreign language classes. The research examined the teachers' classroom practice of accommodating learning style differences and suggests the important steps and modalities to address the educational needs of all students in English language classes. Questionnaire was used to obtain adequate information about teachers' classroom practice of learning style differences. The data assembled and organized was analyzed and explained in detail. The result was interpreted in line with the objectives of the research questions. Findings of the study indicate that more than averages of EFL teachers of Chamo secondary school in Arba Minch, Ethiopia were not accommodating learning style differences in the classroom. Besides, the instructional aids and classroom exercises were mismatching with learning style differences. EFL teachers also were not accommodating and addressing the learning style differences.

1. Introduction

It is quite important and being logical to start from individual differences to understand the theory of learning styles. Individual differences are the unique characteristics or traits in respect of which individuals may show to differ from each other [1]. The history of learning style is closely connected to the history of individual differences or individualities. Particularly, the term learning style could have been subsequently developed from the term individual differences. Thus, it is possible to say that the theory of individual difference could be the base for the today's concept of learning style. By the 1885s, an identification of an individual difference took place and later the concept called as cognitive learning style differences [2].

[3] stated learning style as the way that is consistent in perceiving, conceptualizing, organizing, and recalling information. According to this point of view, learners obtain information in different ways that they prefer to learn. Therefore, it is possible to say that learning style is one of the areas of learners' differences in which they differ from each other in the way of preference that may influence their overall orientation in learning situations.

[4] in his foreign language curriculum design, listed learning style differences as one area of learners' individual differences that has to be taken in to account when designing a foreign language curriculum. In the same year, Neil Fleming, a university teacher from
