Cancer Clinical Trials A Critical Appraisal:

Cancer Clinical Trials Hans Scheurlen, Richard Kay, Michael Baum, 2012-12-06 The controlled clinical trial has become an essential part of the clinician's decision making process. Clinical trials however still raise methodological problems that are important and at the same time controversial: subgroup analysis and interactions, meta-analysis of similar trials, consideration of subjective clinical opinions and those of the public at large, assessment of quality of life, prevention trials and so on. In February 1987 we took our third step along the road to evaluating these issues in dialogues between clinicians, psychologists, legal experts and statisticians. The talks presented at the meeting were revised by the authors afterwards and have been rearranged by the editors to form a strictly organized book. The two preceding meetings in 1978 and 1981 focused strongly on adjuvant therapy in primary breast cancer but this topic served merely as a nucleus in the third meeting. This meeting although called the Third Heidelberg Symposium was forced to leave Heidelberg and in fact was held in Freiburg. Without the interest and enthusiasm of Professor Martin Schumacher and his colleagues in Freiburg the meeting would never have taken place. The meeting was generously supported again by the Federal Ministry of Research and Technology Bundesministerium für Forschung und Technologie BMFT within the framework of the West German BMFT Breast Cancer Study Group. We are grateful in particular to Mr Hans W Herzog for his personal involvement. Juni 1988 H Scheurlen R Kay M

Critical Appraisal of Epidemiological Studies and Clinical Trials Mark Elwood, 2017-03-01 Since publication of the first three editions of this hugely successful book systematic methods of critical appraisal have been accepted as central to healthcare provision both in critical applications and in a wider health services and community perspective. This new edition builds on the work of the previous editions by presenting a fully updated and accessible system of critical appraisal applicable to clinical epidemiological and public health studies and related fields. The book outlines the systematic review process for the establishment of causal effect within single and multiple studies. Focusing primarily on study design it covers randomized and non randomized trials, cohort studies, case control studies and surveys showing the presentation of results including person time and survival analysis and issues in the selection of subjects. It then describes the process of detection and assessment of selection biases, observation bias, confounding, chance variation and how to determine internal validity and external validity, generalizability. Statistical methods are presented in an accessible way illustrating applications to each study design. Positive features of causation including strength, dose response and consistency are also discussed. The final chapters provide six examples of critical appraisals of major studies encompassing randomized trials, prospective and retrospective cohort studies and case control studies. Statistical issues are explained clearly without complex mathematics and the most useful methods are summarized in the appendix each with a worked example. Each main chapter includes self test questions with answers provided making the book ideally suited to readers with no prior epidemiological or statistical knowledge. Developed over four editions. Critical
