Camp Cookery or How to Live in Camp Maria Parloa, 2017-06-22 The first thing to parties bent on roughing it is the selection of a tent which can be hired of any of the sail makers for any length of time and at a reasonable price For a party of seven or eight an eight foot wall tent is the best Dig a trench around the outside to avoid nocturnal baptism the first time it rains The beds can be comfortably arranged in the rear of the tent by laying rubber blankets on the ground on which lay boards slightly raised for the head and sloping to the ground at the foot These beds should be placed so that the persons 6 will lie with their heads at the sides of the tent and feet toward the center On the boards spread straw hay or dry seaweed then the blankets Every thing used about the bed should be laid in the sun every day Some prefer sleeping on the ground rolled up in a blanket but this is imprudent except in very dry localities The next important thing is the stove The top of a common cooking stove with covers and stove pipe to fit which can be bought at any junk shop for a trifle serves very well in dry weather Dig out a place in the side of a bank the size and shape of the stove top about two feet deep and line three sides with brick or stones with the front open Regulate the draught by placing something in front for a blower The Lexington Camping Stove which is the neatest the most compact and convenient thing of the kind I ever saw gotten up by the Lexington Botanical Club 7 for their own use is just the article for camp It is a box stove made of sheet iron light and quickly set up or taken down It fits into a wooden chest which is thirty inches long sixteen and a half deep and fifteen broad Into the stove fits a large water tank and into the tank and one end of the stove fit all the utensils for cooking and serving When the stove is set up the chest answers for a closet for stores and also for a seat

Camping Guidebook George Sullivan, 1965 Camp Cookery Horace Kephart, 2016-07-18 Camp Cookery is Horace Kephart's turn of the 20th Century classic on the art of campfire cookery Cooking on a campfire is largely a matter of proper
