Canada's monsters have been pretty quiet recently

WINNIPEG, Jan. 11—Canada's most notorious monster, the werewolf, was spotted in the Yukon and in an east coast province in the last 24 hours, but it was nowhere to be seen in the rest of the country.

In Alberta, a woman reported sightings of a "black bear" in the mountains near the town of Banff. She said she saw a creature that looked like a black bear, but it was much larger and had a more menacing appearance. She said she was alone in the woods when she saw it.

The same edition of the "New York Times" and the "Montreal Herald" also reported sightings of a creature that looked like a black bear, but it was much larger and had a more menacing appearance.
