APPROX WRITING FOR THE HUMANITIES: "SPEAK THE KING'S ENGLISH"

Approximate date: 1800s. "Speak the King's English" is a piece of advice given to students by a teacher in a classroom. The teacher is speaking to a group of students and is giving them advice on how to write. The teacher is speaking to a group of students and is giving them advice on how to write. The teacher is speaking to a group of students and is giving them advice on how to write. The teacher is speaking to a group of students and is giving them advice on how to write.

Approximate: A writing about the importance of writing well in the classroom.

When you write for history, you are writing to inform, to persuade, and to entertain. You are writing to tell a story, to explain a concept, or to argue a point. You are writing to show that you understand the subject and that you can communicate that understanding to others. You are writing to show that you are a critical thinker and that you can evaluate evidence and make a reasoned judgment. You are writing to show that you are a responsible citizen and that you can contribute to the community. You are writing to show that you are a lifelong learner and that you are always seeking to improve yourself and your knowledge of the world.
