The Philosophy of Law Meets the Philosophy of Technology Mireille Hildebrandt, Antoinette Rouvroy, 2011-08-26 Law, Human Agency, and Autonomic Computing interrogates the legal implications of the notion and experience of human agency implied by the emerging paradigm of autonomic computing and the socio-technical infrastructures it supports. The development of autonomic computing and ambient intelligence self-governing systems challenge traditional philosophical conceptions of human self-constitution and agency with significant consequences for the theory and practice of constitutional self-government. Ideas of identity, subjectivity, agency, personhood, intentionality, and embodiment are all central to the functioning of modern legal systems. But once artificial entities become more autonomic and less dependent on deliberate human intervention, criteria like agency, intentionality, and self-determination become too fragile to serve as defining criteria for human subjectivity, personality, or identity, and for characterizing the processes through which individual citizens become moral and legal subjects. Are autonomic yet artificial systems shrinking the distance between acting subjects and acted-upon objects? How distinctively human will agency be in a world of autonomic computing? Or alternatively, does autonomic computing merely disclose that we were never in this sense human anyway? A dialogue between philosophers of technology and philosophers of law, this book addresses these questions as it takes up the unprecedented opportunity that autonomic computing and ambient intelligence offer for a reassessment of the most basic concepts of law.

Sarah Williams Goldhagen, 2017-04-11 One of the nation's chief architecture critics reveals how the environments we build profoundly shape our feelings, memories, and well-being, and argues that we must harness this knowledge to construct a world better suited to human experience. Taking us on a fascinating journey through some of the world's best and worst landscapes, buildings, and cityscapes, Sarah Williams Goldhagen draws from recent research in cognitive neuroscience and psychology to demonstrate how people's experiences of the places they build are central to their well-being, their physical health, their communal and social lives, and even their very sense of themselves. From this foundation, Goldhagen presents a powerful case that societies must use this knowledge to rethink what and how they build the world needs better designed healthier environments that address the complex range of human individual and social needs By 2050 America s population is projected to increase by nearly seventy million people This will necessitate a vast amount of new construction almost all in urban areas that will dramatically transform our existing landscapes infrastructure and urban areas Going forward we must do everything we can to prevent the construction of exhausting overstimulating environments and enervating understimulating ones Buildings landscapes and cities must both contain and spark associations of natural light greenery and other ways of being in landscapes that humans have evolved to need and expect Fancy exteriors and dramatic forms are never enough and may not even be necessary authentic textures and surfaces and careful well executed construction details are just as important Erudite wise lucidly written and beautifully illustrated with more than one hundred color photographs Welcome to Your World is a vital eye opening guide to the spaces we inhabit physically and mentally and a clarion call to design for human experience
