Science and Innovation Diplomacy (S&ID) has emerged in recent years as a relevant scholarly movement and interdisciplinary research agenda internationally. This field is promoting a significant impact on the understanding of the cultural and political dynamics of Science, Technology and Innovation (ST&I), implementing initiatives from local to global level. Notwithstanding, S&ID is growing asymmetrically around the world, setting up over a particular configuration in the so-called Global South (GS) societies. In Latin America (LA), although S&ID is a recent, unequal and intra-nationally fragmented process, there are important achievements that have been able to create a favorable mix of approaches, agendas, and practices in this field. Addressing the scope of the special issue “Science Diplomacy and Sustainable Development: Perspectives from Latin America,” this article aims to present a comprehensive analytical typology to the study of the emerging experiences of S&ID in LA, catching the diversity of this research agenda. This is a qualitative merged method-based study, sustained by a literature review, documentary research, online data analysis, and typology building. We understand S&ID in LA as a tentative re-organization of different states and subnational actors around the study and institutionalization of the governance of contemporary transformations on the systems of ST&I.

Keywords: Science and Innovation Diplomacy, science, innovation, institutional building, interdisciplinary, Latin America

INTRODUCTION

Science and Innovation Diplomacy (S&ID) has been significantly impacting the understanding of the cultural and political dynamics of Science, Technology and Innovation (ST&I) over the last few years, from local to global level. We understand S&ID as a relatively recent scholarly movement and interdisciplinary research agenda addressing the study of how state and subnational actors interfere in the supranational governance of ST&I, as well as the idealization and management of tools of tentative governance regarding this field in different cultural settings. A relevant question about S&ID can be how those actors are capable of reconfiguring political and sociotechnical infrastructures to foster broader and more independent regimes of governance of science and innovation in different national contexts, by strengthening tools of international collaboration to sustain the potential of virtually permanent supranational initiatives.

There has never been a better time for the social fabric matrix As this book is being published the idea that unregulated market capitalism leads to the best of all possible worlds has been thoroughly discredited A series of economic and social problems have come to the forefront of national discussion and policy debates There is now widespread acceptance that human activity particularly the consumption of nonrenewable energy resources has contributed to global warming The lack of oversight of the financial industry encouraged reckless practices that endangered the stability of the entire financial system prompting bailout efforts based on the fragile interdependence of the financial and economic systems The shortcomings of our health care system are increasingly evident including the growing number of uninsured citizens the difficulties for businesses in offering health insurance and the effects of health and health care on the ability of individuals and families to maintain a decent standard of living Perhaps the best illustration of a complex system that cries out for coordinated policy making is in the critical area of energy where public and private decisions on energy policy not only have direct effects on consumer costs but also have effects on global warming local ecosystems international relations the health of our citizens and the sustainability of companies and communities In short there is growing recognition of the interdependence of the economic system with the environment and the broader institutions of society Energy Abstracts for Policy Analysis ,1979-11 The Cumulative Book Index ,1975 A world list of books in the English language Reimagining Growth Silvana De Paula,Gary A. Dymksi,2005-05 In this volume a group of eminent economists and other social scientists seek to present an innovative new approach to economic development drawing in part from certain heterodox intellectual traditions within economics as well as from the other social sciences The intention is to point the way theoretically to a much more sophisticated understanding of economic development The ultimate prize they show by grounding theory in a more accurate analysis of social change is policies that really will deliver higher economic growth and greater social justice worldwide
