A computer-mapped flora: a study of the county of Warwickshire D A. CADBURY,1971 A Computer-Mapped Flora

D.A. Cadbury,2012-12-02 A Computer Mapped Flora presents the study of county flora using electronic data processing methods to sort and codify the information gathered This book also uses computer techniques for the construction of distribution maps that report the presence or absence of a species in a certain area and their major habitats The book is comprised of 15 chapters The first chapter is subdivided into two parts that discuss the previous work and a review and revision of old methods used in the study The following paragraphs focus on the physical aspect of the topic This volume includes chapters on the physical background geology and soils and historical geography Also included in the book is a chapter dedicated to the historical survey of Warwickshire bryophytes The following section focuses on the study and research aspect Topics included are the recording and processing of data and habitat studies The topics discussed in the subsequent chapters focus on plants specifically flowering and vascular plants and bryophytes Distribution maps graph plotted maps and vascular plant checklists are some of the topics discussed The book aims to be of service to botanists and other biologists outside of the British setting This reference material will be helpful to other disciplines as the methods documented herein can also be applied to other studies and research Computers in Botanical Collections J.

Brenan,2012-12-06 This volume records the proceedings of and the papers read at an international conference to consider the use of electronic data processing methods in the major taxonomic plant collections of Europe primarily herbaria but also living collections This conference took place at the Royal Botanic Gardens Kew from 3rd to 6th October 1973 It was attended by some 90 delegates observers and speakers mainly from a wide range of the major European herbaria but also from other interested institutions The problem to be discussed was a big one Taxonomic collections of the sorts mentioned above constitute the main centres for the scientific documentation of the flora of the world With the extinction of so many species more or less imminently threatened and with the modification or disappearance of so many vegetation types through the activities of man the information contained in these collections grows in importance Their aggregate size in Europe has been estimated at between 50 and 100 millions and these are annually augmented at a rapid rate Each specimen or living plant comprises a source of evidence and information represented both by the specimen itself and the associated information provided by the collector and subsequent investigators identifications field notes records of subsequent research etc This associated information is known as the label data Research on the taxonomy and geographical distribution of plants usually requires data from specimens stored in a number of institutions in different countries A Computer-mapped Flora D. J. G. Hawkes Cadbury,J. G. Hawkes,R. C. Readett,1971 The Biological Recording Handbook Sarah Whild,2026-03-05

Biological recording is the discipline of writing down natural history observations of a correctly identified species in a specific location on a specific date by a named individual Simple enough you may think But these four pieces of data each have their own pitfalls for the unwary whether making records or using them in analysis This is the first time that all of the principles and processes of biological recording have been brought together with a detailed look at some fascinating historical examples What is biological recording why do we do it how did it start and why does it underpin just about every evidence based decision that is made in conservation The book covers The art of recording in depth practical information from site specific work and different habitats to handling absence data bias and error Planning including relevant legislation and monitoring Context databases collections rarities refereeing validation Analysis working with lists and indicator species Reporting how to the community ownership and confidentiality Controversial topics such as species reintroductions are discussed tips are offered on how to make the most effective use of data and readers are invited to carry out thought experiments on aspects of their own recording activities as well as considering the future of this all important discipline The Biological Recording Handbook provides comprehensive guidance for anyone making wildlife records whether amateur recorder ecological consultant or conservation biology academic

The Changing Wildlife of Great Britain and Ireland David L. Hawksworth, 2003-06-26 Periodic comprehensive overviews of the status of the diverse organisms that make up wildlife are essential to determining trends threats and future prospects Just over 25 years ago leading authorities on different kinds of wildlife came together to prepare an assessment of their status of a wide range of organisms in Great Britain and Ireland in The Changing Flora and Fauna of Britain also edited by Professor David L Hawksworth CBE Now in The Changing Wildlife of Great Britain and Ireland he has gathered together some of the original and also new contributors to review changes since that time and look to the future Contributions range from viruses diatoms fungi lichens mites and nematodes through butterflies dragonflies flies and slugs to flowering plants ferns mammals birds and fish The state of knowledge in different groups is assessed and the effectiveness of statutory and other measures taken to safeguard wildlife considered The picture is far from bleak ameliorating sulphur dioxide levels have benefited sensitive lichens and mosses in a dramatic way water quality improvement has been beneficial there have been few certain extinctions and rediscoveries of species thought to have been lost Biodiversity Action Plans have also benefited targeted species but habitat restoration and management for some is not always good for others But there are worrying trends in declining populations with an increasing number being regarded as threatened or endangered especially in agricultural areas and where woodland management has changed particular threats from introduced species and concern over the effects of climate change Some of the smaller organisms remain poorly known a situation unlikely to change as expertise in many is scant or being lost This stock check and look to the future will be a key source book to conservationists naturalists and professional biologists for many years to come
