A Policeman Ponders:

Men O Pause and Ponder ... Steve McEwen,2021-04-26 This book is not a scientific or a medically researched piece of work deliberately not so It tells the stories of four modern day men in a humorous fictional context to promote discussion and to raise awareness and acceptance of the Male Menopause condition The behaviour of the Male members of the human species is based on three founding instincts all beginning with the letter P They are Provision Protection and Procreation Going back to the origins of the human species our male forefathers were active hunters and latterly farmers ensuring food was provided for their families They also developed weapons and built homes to protect their families and were driven by sexual urges to procreate with their female counterparts So how do these founding instincts translate into the behaviours of modern man The stories in this book are based on the lives of four fictional males John Tony Paul and Steve They follow the development and experiences of these males from children to young men through to adulthood and into old age These stories suggest that adult male behaviour is determined at an early stage in child development that these formative years are all important in helping us understand why certain issues are important to us in our adult lives This is particularly relevant in boys to understand and debate their intriguing journey through into manhood and then those twilight years Points to

Ponder Mirza Bashir-ud-Din Mahmud Ahmad,2011-01-01 The stories related in this collection share a common theme that is they describe incidents in which the main characters consistently display the ability and the courage to say or to do the right thing no matter what By exemplifying virtues such as piety integrity honesty and self discipline these people confirm to us that standing up for what is right during times of challenge and controversy is the best way to teach others They bring truth to the adage that states Setting an example is not the main means of influencing another it is the only means The
