Touching Home Mary Craig, 2025-10-31 Baseball's relationship to American ideals has long been an object of study across disciplines. In Touching Home, Mary Craig contributes to this ongoing study by relating issues of class, race, and gender to America's theoretical tradition of liberalism and republicanism established during the nation's founding era. Specifically, Touching Home traces theories of individualism and civic virtue from the founding era through baseball's place in American society at the end of the twentieth century. The work also examines the mythologizing of baseball's pastoralism, racial equality, and inculcation of manliness as a civic virtue. These myths became ingrained in baseball in significant ways, including, for example, the Supreme Court's granting of an antitrust exemption to Major League Baseball (MLB)'s promotion of Jackie Robinson's career as proof of its leadership in and commitment to desegregation, and the short-lived All American Girls Professional Baseball League (1943-1954) and subsequent relegation of women to softball. Through the exploration of these and other societal issues, Craig's work highlights baseball's development from accessible hobby to multi-billion-dollar corporation, exploring the ways in which the sport has helped shape how individual Americans engage with politics. Indeed, in the pages of Touching Home, readers will find a demythologizing of baseball that helps them better understand the results of their efforts to form community through engaging with teams at both the local and national levels. Scholars of American politics, particularly American political thought, will be intrigued to find baseball used as a case study of the effectiveness of the founders' project of crafting a jointly liberal-republican framework capable of directing Americans toward responsible citizenship. In all of these ways, Touching Home upholds the value of studying popular culture, presenting baseball as a unique and highly interesting lens through which to help us appreciate how individual Americans relate to politics and parties in their respective communities and nationally.

The Cooperstown Symposium on Baseball and American Culture, 1998 Thomas L. Altherr, 2002-06-03 This is an anthology of 20 papers that were presented at the Tenth Cooperstown Symposium on Baseball and American Culture held in June 1998 and co-sponsored by the State University of New York at Oneonta and the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum. Commencing with a perceptive speech by keynote speaker G. Edward White, this Symposium examined such topics as whether a city can support two (not just one) major league teams, how television broadcasters and their ball clubs interrelate, and how masculine dominance in baseball mainly curtailed female advancement in the game and business. These essays, divided into sections titled Baseball as a Business, Baseball and Communication, Baseball and Racial and Ethnic Perspectives, Baseball and Gender Matters, Baseball and Images, and The Other Leagues of Baseball, cut through the quick and easy judgments of the media and offer instead the longer, more informed view of scholars and researchers.

Before the Ivy Laurent Pernot, 2015-02-15 All Cub fans know from heartbreak and curse-toting goats. Fewer know that prior to moving to the north side in 1916, the team fielded powerhouse nines that regularly claimed the pennant. Before the Ivy offers a grandstand seat to a golden age.
