Barefoot in Athens (Classic Reprint) Maxwell Anderson,2017-11-30 Excerpt from Barefoot in Athens Socrates was put to death in Athens In 399 b c Nothing had been written about him during his life except The C oyds a caricature for the comic stage but after his death a whole school of writing grew up around him Socratic dialogues were written by at least seven men whose names we know and probably by many others It was all the rage to write these question and answer scenes with Socrates as the central character much as the sonnet sequence was all the rage in the England of I 590 Some of the men who wrote the dialogues had been students or companions of Socrates No doubt they tried to give a fairly accurate account of their dead master Knowing however that there was no shorthand system in those days we can be sure that neither the exact words of Socrates nor the exact order of events was ever recorded It was probably not considered important that the record be exact Each man writing a dialogue was turning out his own work of art and taking cer tain liberties with his recollection even when he was not con structing an imaginary conversation which he thought Socrates might have had It is instructive that the two accounts of Socrates trial that remain agree in only one passage the word ing of the indictment Socrates is quoted at length in both but there are few even roughly parallel arguments and none identical About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
