Allergy in Children Jan A. Kuzemko, 1978

Allergic Diseases and the Environment Erika Isolauri, W. Allan Walker, 2004 During the last two decades the increase in allergic diseases in children such as atopic dermatitis and asthma has been drastic However this is not true for the entire world the incidence of allergies in children has risen only in developed countries The observation of this socio geographic discrepancy has led to careful study of the environmental differences that exist between the diverse settings in which children are born and has resulted in the so called hygiene hypothesis the sterility of modern hospitals and birth places in the developed world might lead to a lack of microbial stimulation required for the development of a balanced mucosal immune response including expansion of T helper Th cell subsets that can mediate immune responses Therefore this workshop was held to consider in depth the environmental factors that influence the changing pattern of worldwide childhood allergy This publication is a valuable source of knowledge and update for nutritionists pediatricians immunologists microbiologists as well as
