Coastal Defences Peter W. French,2001 Coastal Defences aims to present the broad spectrum of methods that engineers use to protect the coastline and investigates the sorts of issues that can arise as a result The first section of the book examines traditional hard techniques such as sea walls and groynes whilst the second looks at the more recent trend of using techniques more sympathetic to nature By looking at each of the main methods of coastal protection in detail the book investigates the rationale for using each method and the consequent management issues presenting a case for and against each of the techniques

Pacific Northwest Coastal Environments Ronald C. Chaney,2024-11-29 Pacific Northwest Coastal Environments Earthquakes and Sea Level Rise investigates the potential impacts of changes in global sea level by examining historical sea and land levels projected future levels and by determining how those changes may affect future tides and storm surges to inform their potential to cause harmful impacts This region has a unique interaction of land sea and tectonics Climate and tectonic change can initiate issues ranging from an inundation of coastal areas due to a combination of sea level rise vertical land movement and potential tsunami This combination of factors leads to the retreat of coastal shorelines due to erosion caused by both tidal action and wave runup Specific topics explored in this book include the following Coastal erosion rates along the Pacific Northwest coastline from Eureka California to Vancouver Island British Columbia Sea cliff retreat mitigation techniques looking at both the advantages and disadvantages of the different techniques Interaction between subduction zone earthquakes and vertical land movement Wave characterization in both deep and shallow water In addition the book looks at both wave refraction and reflection along the coastline Tides along the Pacific Northwest coastline and their role in calculating the relative sea level and its effect on coastal erosion Coastal Protection in the Aftermath of the Indian Ocean Tsunami ,2007

Landscape Management and Native Plantings to Preserve the Beach Between Biloxi and Pass Christian, Mississippi Tom Cathcart,Pete Melby,2009 Erosion on the 42 kilometer manmade beach between Biloxi and Pass Christian takes three forms The southeast and southerly winds that prevail for much of the year blow sand over the seawall onto the highway bordering the beach to the north Storm water from rain washes sand down the beach toward the Mississippi Sound to the south Wave action and currents remove sand from the beach water interface during high energy events Current beach management practices exacerbate the erosion process and shorten the time interval between renourishment projects Raking and grooming the beach fluffs the sand increasing its vulnerability to erosion caused by wind and storm water runoff Heavy equipment compacts the sand beneath the fluffed layer The ability of rainwater to infiltrate the compacted sub sand is reduced resulting in more water transport down beach than would otherwise be the case increasing sand transport with the runoff Use of native plant species on the beach represents an alternative to current management practices for much of the beach Native plants are adapted to survive in the harsh conditions that are common in a beach environment Native plantings will inhibit or halt all three erosion processes allowing renourishment projects to be delayed or avoided National Sea Grant Library publication website The International Journal of Marine and Coastal Law ,2002
