In a letter to her publisher, Rossetti claimed that the poem, which is interpreted frequently as having features of remarkably sexual imagery, was not meant for children. However, in public, Rossetti often stated that the poem was intended for children and went on to write many children's poems. When the poem appeared in her first volume of poetry Goblin Market and Other Poems it was illustrated by her brother the Pre-Raphaelite artist Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Goblin Market is about two close sisters, Laura and Lizzie, as well as the goblins to whom the title refers. Although the sisters seem to be quite young, they live by themselves in a house and are accustomed to draw water every evening from a stream. As the poem begins, twilight is falling, and as usual, the sisters hear the calls from the goblin merchants who sell fruits in fantastic abundance, variety, and savour. On this evening, Laura lingers at the stream after her sister has left for home, intrigued by the goblins' strange manner and appearance. Rossetti hints that the goblin men resemble animals, for example, having faces like wombats or cats and possessing tails. Longing for the goblin fruits but having no money, the impulsive Laura offers a lock of her hair and a tear, more rare than pearl.

Goblin Market and Other Poems Christina Georgina Rossetti, Chris Emery, 2009 Christina Rossetti's poetry was largely ignored in the early part of the twentieth century during the Modernist movement's backlash against much Victorian writing. However, by the 1970s Rossetti was rescued from obscurity, and her poetry gained in popularity. Rossetti's imagination is profoundly religious, and Christian themes dominate her writing. Her most famous poem, Goblin Market, is at first reading a tale of two sisters and their misadventures with goblins, yet the work is multi-faceted, sexual, and complex. Many see elements of early feminism in her work. Rossetti worked as a volunteer at a women's refuge for former prostitutes. Rossetti was plagued by illness and depression, yet by the time of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's death in 1861, she was hailed as the next female laureate and viewed as a natural successor. This selection contains her best-known poems and includes some fine examples from her devotional writing. Selected by Chris Emery and published to coincide with National Poetry Month, April 2009.
