Bartleby, the Scrivener a Story of Wall-Street Herman Melville,2016-05-23 Bartleby the Scrivener explores the theme of isolation in American life and the workplace through actual physical loneliness and mental loneliness Although all of the characters at the office are related by being co workers Bartleby is the only one whose name is known to us and seems serious as the rest of characters have odd nicknames such as Nippers or Turkey this excludes him from being normal in the workplace Bartleby s former job was at the Dead Letter Office that received mail with nowhere to go representing the isolation of communication that Bartleby had at both places of work being that he was given a separate work area for himself at the lawyer s office Bartleby never leaves the office but repeats what he does all day long copying staring and repeating his famous words of I would prefer not to leading readers to have another image of the repetition that leads to isolation on Wall Street and the American workplace

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville,2016-06-28 Bartleby the Scrivener is a short story by the American writer Herman Melville. The narrator of Bartleby the Scrivener is the Lawyer who runs a law practice on Wall Street in New York. The Lawyer begins by noting that he is an elderly man and that his profession has brought him into more than ordinary contact with what would seem an interesting and somewhat singular set of men: the law copyists or scriveners. While the Lawyer knows many interesting stories of such scriveners, he bypasses them all in favor of telling the story of Bartleby, whom he finds to be the most interesting of all the scriveners. Bartleby is, according to the Lawyer, one of those beings of whom nothing is ascertainable except from the original sources, and in his case those were very small. One day the Lawyer has a small document he needs examined. He calls Bartleby in to do the job, but Bartleby responds, "I would prefer not to." This answer amazes the Lawyer, who has a natural expectancy of instant compliance. He is so amazed by this response and the calm way Bartleby says it that he cannot even bring himself to scold Bartleby. Instead, he calls in Nippers to examine the document instead.

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2010-02 Bartleby the Scrivener was written by Herman Melville in 1853, two years after Moby Dick had been published and his writing career was beginning to lose its luster. Subtitled A Story of Wall Street, the book is a seemingly simple story about a lawyer who hires a gentleman named Bartleby as a scrivener in his office. In those long ago days, before copy machines, scriveners had the tedious job of hand-copying documents, sometimes over and over. Bartleby was good at the copying part of his job, but when asked to proofread aloud, one day he simply replied, "I prefer not to." From that moment forward, he used the phrase "I prefer not to" for every task requested of him, eventually preferring not to do any work whatsoever. The lawyer, who is astounded by Bartleby's attitude, tells the story in the first person. The story is rich in language and yet spare in actual action. The reader is forced to think and think seriously about the choices we make daily. Bartleby chose to rebel and become an anti-hero. But the real protagonist of the story is the lawyer, who is drawn into Bartleby's power and grows to admire him. The conclusion is sad but inevitable. The story of Bartleby is simply about a man losing his will to live. It is intended to show the reader a dark side in all of us when the meaning of our existence is allowed to be challenged. The chilling image of Bartleby in his previous job at the Dead Letter Office and the fact that Melville left Bartleby's reason for being or not being a mystery all adds to the intrigue of Bartleby the Scrivener. First published anonymously in Putnam's Monthly Magazine, Bartleby the Scrivener reflects Melville's own pessimism at the time.

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2020-09-08 Bartleby the Scrivener: A Story of Wall Street by Herman Melville. The narrator, a casual business elderly lawyer, helps wealthy men deal with mortgages, deeds, and bonds, telling the story of the strangest man he has ever known, Bartleby, as a new addition to the narrator's office. The narrator has two staff, Nippers and Turkey. The claws suffer from dyspepsia, and Turkey is drunk. But the office survived because, in the morning, Turkey was sane, even though the claws were frustrated, and in the afternoon, the claws calmed down, even though Turkey was drunk. Bartleby answers questions about the ad, and the narrator hires a naive young man in hopes that his calmness will soothe the moods of other writers. One day when Bartleby was asked to proofread one of the papers he had copied he simply replied I don't want to marks the first of many rejections To the disappointment of the speaker and the frustration of the other employees Bartleby was involved in fewer and fewer duties in the office The narrator tries to reason with Bartleby several times and learns about him But Bartleby always responds the same way when asked to work or to provide information about himself I don't want to On weekends when a speaker stops in the office he finds Bartleby lives at the office The stillness of Bartleby's life leaves the narrator at night and Sundays as desolate as a deserted city He alternates between pity and disgust for Bartleby's bizarre behavior Bartleby continued to deny his duties until eventually he was inactive But the narrator was unable to get him out The scavenger has bizarre powers over his employer and the narrator feels he can't do anything to hurt this homeless man But his business peers become suspicious that Bartleby has turned up at the office as he is not at work and the threat of a shattered reputation leads the narrator to do something His attempts to get Bartleby away were in vain Therefore the speaker moved the office to a new location But shortly thereafter a new tenant of the narrator's old office came to him for help Bartleby would not leave When they drove him out of the office Bartleby haunted the corridors The narrator meets Bartleby in a final attempt to reason with him But Bartleby rejected him Fear of disturbing the anti-Bartleby group the narrator did not have to work for a few days When he returned he learned that Bartleby had been taken to prison At the prison Bartleby appears to be fatter than usual The friendliness of the speaker was rejected The narrator offers a one-stop bribe to make sure Bartleby gets well fed But when the narrator returned a few days later Bartleby died he didn't like to eat Shortly after the narrator heard rumors that Bartleby was working in the dead letter office The narrator reflected that the dead letter would plunge everyone in Bartleby's mood into a darker darkness The letters represent our death and the failure of our best intentions Through Bartleby the narrator sees the world as the miserable writer must have seen it The closing words of the story are the narrator resigns and sighs in pain Ah Bartleby man of the strangest I ever saw or heard of While of other law copyists I might write the complete life of Bartleby nothing of that sort can be done I believe that no materials exist for a full and satisfactory biography of this man It is an irreparable loss to literature Bartleby was one of those beings of whom nothing is ascertainable except from the original sources and in his case those are very small What my own astonished eyes saw of Bartleby that is all I know of him except indeed one vague report which will appear in the sequel
