Clovis Blade Technology:

Clovis Blade Technology Michael B. Collins, Marvin Kay, 2010-07-22 Around 11 000 years ago a Paleoindian culture known to us as Clovis occupied much of North America Considered to be among the continent's earliest human inhabitants the Clovis peoples were probably nomadic hunters and gatherers whose remaining traces include camp sites and caches of goods stored for utilitarian or ritual purposes This book offers the first comprehensive study of a little known aspect of Clovis culture stone blade technology Michael Collins introduces the topic with a close look at the nature of blades and the techniques of their manufacture followed by a discussion of the full spectrum of Clovis lithic technology and how blade production relates to the production of other stone tools He then provides a full report of the discovery and examination of fourteen blades found in 1988 in the Keven Davis Cache in Navarro County Texas Collins also presents a comparative study of known and presumed Clovis blades from many sites discusses the Clovis peoples caching practices and considers what lithic technology and caching behavior can add to our knowledge of Clovis lifeways These findings will be important reading for both specialists and amateurs who are piecing together the puzzle of the peopling of the Americas since the manufacture of blades is a trait that Clovis peoples shared with the Upper Paleolithic peoples in Europe and northern Asia Clovis Blade Technology Michael B. Clovis Lithic Technology Michael R. Waters, Charlotte D. Pevny, David L. Carlson, Thomas A. Jennings, 2011-10-12 Some 13 000 years ago humans were drawn repeatedly to a small valley in what is now Central Texas near the banks of Buttermilk Creek These early hunter gatherers camped collected stone and shaped it into a variety of tools they needed to hunt game process food and subsist in the Texas wilderness Their toolkit included bifaces blades and deadly spear points Where they worked they left thousands of pieces of debris which have allowed archaeologists to reconstruct their methods of tool production Along with the faunal material that was also discarded in their prehistoric campsite these stone or lithic artifacts afford a glimpse of human life at the end of the last ice age during an era referred to as Clovis The area where these people roamed and camped called the Gault site is one of the most important Clovis sites in North America A decade ago a team from Texas A M University excavated a single area of the site formally named Excavation Area 8 but informally dubbed the Lindsey Pit which features the densest concentration of Clovis artifacts and the clearest stratigraphy at the Gault site Some 67 000 lithic artifacts were recovered during fieldwork along with 5 700 pieces of faunal material In a thorough synthesis of the evidence from this prehistoric workshop Michael R Waters and his coauthors provide the technical data needed to interpret and compare this site with other sites from the same period illuminating the story of Clovis people in the Buttermilk Creek Valley Convergent Evolution in Stone-Tool Technology Michael J. O'Brien, Briggs Buchanan, Metin I.

Eren,2024-05-21 Scholars from a variety of disciplines consider cases of convergence in lithic technology when functional or developmental constraints result in similar forms in independent lineages Hominins began using stone tools at least 2.6 million years ago perhaps even 3.4 million years ago Given the nearly ubiquitous use of stone tools by humans and their ancestors the study of lithic technology offers an important line of inquiry into questions of evolution and behavior This book examines convergence in stone tool making cases in which functional or developmental constraints result in similar forms in independent lineages Identifying examples of convergence and distinguishing convergence from divergence refutes hypotheses that suggest physical or cultural connection between far flung prehistoric toolmakers Employing phylogenetic analysis and stone tool replication the contributors show that similarity of tools can be caused by such common constraints as the fracture properties of stone or adaptive challenges rather than such unlikely phenomena as migration of toolmakers over an Arctic ice shelf Contributors R Alexander Bentley Briggs Buchanan Marcelo Cardillo Mathieu Charbonneau Judith Charlin Chris Clarkson Loren G Davis Metin I Eren Peter Hiscock Thomas A Jennings Steven L Kuhn Daniel E Lieberman George R McGhee Alex Mackay Michael J O'Brien Charlotte D Pevny Ceri Shipton Ashley M Smallwood Heather Smith Jayne Wilkins Samuel C Willis Nicolas Zayns A Microwear Study of Clovis Blades from the Gault Site, Bell County, Texas Scott Alan Minchak,2010 Prehistoric quarries in America are poorly understood and thus problematical to take into account when making inferences about past behavior A microwear analysis of Clovis blades from the 2000 Texas A 2 is there a difference in the use wear patterns of Clovis blades from the geological units 3a and 3b and 3 is Gault as a quarry workshop site a place to just obtain raw materials or did it also serve as a craft site Observations from experiments stereomicroscope analysis compound microscope analysis and SEM EDS analysis led to answers for two research questions 1 blades were used at Gault and 2 there is a difference between Clovis units 3a and 3b Eight Clovis 3a blades or 3.0% of the total Clovis 3a blade blade fragment population n 264 exhibit use wear Six Clovis 3b blades 3.3% of the total Clovis 3b blade blade fragment population n 182 exhibit use wear In general Clovis 3b blades were used on harder contact materials wood to bone than those in Clovis Unit 3a softer contact materials similar to grass sinew and rawhide The functions of quarries and quarry related workshops were interpreted by William Henry Holmes as a place to obtain raw materials while Kirk Bryan interpreted them as a place to bring other materials to work in craft activities Following the microwear analysis of Clovis blades blade fragments at Gault I compared Gault to three other Paleoindian quarry workshop sites Wells Creek Dutchess Quarry and West Athens Hill My intent is to provide supplemental data for the consideration when applying Holmes and Bryan's respective hypotheses

Folsom Lithic Technology Daniel S.
