High Throughput Gasification HTG Process Bell Single Stage High Mass Flux HMF Process Cities Service Rockwell CS R Hydrogasification Process and the Exxon Catalytic Coal Gasification CCG Process Each process is evaluated for its potential to produce SNG from a bituminous coal In addition to identifying the new technology these processes represent key similarities differences strengths weaknesses and potential improvements to each process are identified The AVCO HTG and the Bell HMF gasifiers share similarities with respect to short residence time SRT high throughput rate slagging and syngas as the initial raw product gas The CS R Hydrogasifier is also SRT but is non slagging and produces a raw gas high in methane content The Exxon CCG gasifier is a long residence time catalytic fluidbed reactor producing all of the raw product Coal Gasification Carlito Ronquillo Aleta, 1971 Carbon and Coal Gasification J.L. Figueiredo, Jacob A.

Moulijn, 2012-12-06 Carbon gasification reactions form the basis of many important industrial processes such as the combustion of coal and the production of synthesis gas fuel gases and activated carbons They are also involved in metallurgical processes and in the regeneration of coked catalysts Thus understanding the fundamentals of carbon gasification is of vital importance for further technological development Moreover the subject is of interdisciplinary nature involving chemistry materials science and chemical engineering Therefore it was thought that an Advanced Study Institute would be fruitful in establishing the state of the art in bringing together experts from the various sectors involved and in identifying areas of required research and industrial development Such a meeting was held at Alvor Portugal from the 20th to the 31st May 1985 and the lectures presented the results are collected in this volume The present volume is organized in seven chapters The Introduction presents the carbon gasification reactions and their relevance for particular processes and industrial uses In the second chapter the structures of carbon and coal are reviewed together with methods of structural chemical and textural characterization Coal Gasification Processes for the Production of Pipeline Quality Gas John
