Dyadic Decision Making:

Dyadic Decision Making David Brinberg, James Jaccard, 2012-12-06 Recent research on joint or dyadic decision making has received renewed attention from behavioral scientists This interest is due mostly to the advances in analytic and conceptual models used to study interaction processes A number of related disciplines have used distinctive paradigms to study the same focal problem namely the processes by which two people interact come to resolve a problem and finally reach a decision Dyadic Decision Making presents in a single integrated volume the conceptual and analytic strategies developed in communications research marketing psychology and sociology to investigate joint decision making Dyadic Decision Making David Brinberg, 1989 The Process of Dyadic Decision Making in Family Caregiving Victor G. Becker, Gerald M. Dupree, James E. George, AIR FORCE INST OF TECH WRIGHT-PATTERSON AFB OHIO SCHOOL OF SYSTEMS AND LOGISTICS., 1976 Several theories concerning the process utilized by groups individuals to make a decision have been identified but not extensively tested in experimental research These theories include optimization Herbert Simons satisficing theory and Peer Soelberg s confirmation hypothesis The researchers conducted an experiment to observe the decision making process of natural dyadic groups natural being defined as a group having both a history and an expected future as a group The researchers hypothesized that when faced with a nonprogrammed decision making task natural dyadic groups would utilize a decision process that conformed to Peer Soelberg s confirmation Hypothesis That is they would 1 search beyond the first acceptable alternative 2 reduce the number of acceptable alternatives to two prior to making a final decision 3 not compare acceptable alternatives with each other until after search had terminated and 4 choose an earlier acceptable alternative rather than the last acceptable alternative identified during search The results of the experiment supported Soelberg s confirmation hypothesis and also demonstrated that the decision process was not influenced by the degree of the importance of the decision to the decision makers The results of the experiment also illuminate areas for further research in the area of group decision theory Author Decision Making Processes of Natural Dyadic Groups Walter A.
