International Handbook of Historical Archaeology
Teresita Majewski,David Gaimster,2009-06-07 In studying the past archaeologists have focused on the material remains of our ancestors Prehistorians generally have only artifacts to study and rely on the diverse material record for their understanding of past societies and their behavior Those involved in studying historically documented cultures not only have extensive material remains but also contemporary texts images and a range of investigative technologies to enable them to build a broader and more reflexive picture of how past societies communities and individuals operated and behaved Increasingly historical archaeology refers not to a particular period place or a method but rather an approach that interrogates the tensions between artifacts and texts irrespective of context In short historical archaeology provides direct evidence for how humans have shaped the world we live in today Historical archaeology is a branch of global archaeology that has grown in the last 40 years from its North American base into an increasingly global community of archaeologists each studying their area of the world in a historical context Where historical archaeology started as part of the study of the post Columbian societies of the United States and Canada it has now expanded to interface with the post medieval archaeologies of Europe and the diverse post imperial experiences of Africa Latin America and Australasia The 36 essays in the International Handbook of Historical Archaeology have been specially commissioned from the leading researchers in their fields creating a wide ranging digest of the increasingly global field of historical archaeology The volume is divided into two sections the first reviewing the key themes issues and approaches of historical archaeology today and the second containing a series of case studies charting the development and current state of historical archaeological practice around the world This key reference work captures the energy and diversity of this global discipline today

General Technical Report RM. ,1988 Archaeological Method and Theory Ed Schiffer,1989 Hasanlu, Volume I Mary M. Voigt,1983-01-29 Any consideration of the Iranian plateau must include the important site of Hasanlu in northern Iran The Museum carried out excavations from 1956 through 1977 A major aspect of the research focused on the Iron Age settlement This fortified town was attacked around 800 B C The attack and accompanying fire caused the rapid collapse of public buildings Thus the site provides a unique opportunity to examine a wide range of objects and materials still in the contexts in which they were stored University Museum Monograph 50 Posing Questions for a Scientific Archaeology Terry L. Hunt,Carl P. Lipo,Sarah L. Sterling,2001-06-30 Although many believe that archaeological knowledge consists simply of empirical findings this notion is false data are generated with the guidance of theory or some sense making system acting in its place whether researchers recognize this or not Failure to understand the relationship between theory and the empirical world has led to the many debates and frustrations of contemporary archaeology Despite years of trying the atheoretical empiricist foundations of archaeology have left us little but a history of storytelling and unsatisfying generalizations about historical change and human diversity The present work offers promising directions for building theoretically defensible results by providing well designed case studies that can be used as guides or exemplars Evolutionary theory in at least some form is the foundation for a scientific archaeology that will yield scientific explanations for historical change
