

WHAT IS THE HINTS EXAM?

The HINTS exam is a very sensitive (96%–100%) and specific (96%–98%) collection of assessments that should be performed on patients who have acute and active dizziness, nausea, head motion intolerance, and gait instability. The exam has been shown to be more sensitive at determining the presence of a central lesion in the brainstem or cerebellum than MRI in the first 24 hours. The exam consists of the the following three tests:

1. Horizontal head impulse testing (Head Impulse)
2. Direction-changing nystagmus in eccentric gaze (Nystagmus)
3. Vertical skew (Test of Skew)

1 HEAD IMPULSE TESTING OR VESTIBULO-OCULAR TESTING

With the patient seated, hold their head with slight cervical flexion. Ask the patient to fixate their eyes on your nose. Quickly rotate the head in one direction. The patient's eyes should stay fixated on your nose; if they drift in the direction of the head during the test before re-fixating on your nose, the test is positive.

2 NYSTAGMUS

Assess for continuous nystagmus that changes direction with lateral gaze.

3 TEST OF SKEW

Cover one eye for several seconds and quickly uncover it. A positive finding is associated with an upward drift of the covered eye to realign when the cover is removed.
