Broadcasting The Blues:

Broadcasting the Blues Paul Oliver, 2014-02-04 Broadcasting the Blues Black Blues in the Segregation Era is based on Paul Oliver's award-winning radio broadcasts from the BBC that were created over several decades. It traces the social history of the blues in America from its birth in the rural South through the heyday of sound recordings. Noted blues scholar Paul Oliver draws on decades of research and personal interviews with performers, some of whom he discovered and recorded for the first time to draw a picture of how the blues aesthetic developed, giving new insights into the role blues played in American society before racial integration. The book begins by outlining the history of the blues from African music through country stomps, ragtime songs, and field hollers. From the heroic figures of black folksong, including the steel-driving railroad worker John Henry and the destructive Boll Weevil, to the content of the emerging blues, the author discusses the meaning behind the often-coded words of the blues, evoking topics such as playful sexuality, magic, and medicine, the stresses of segregation, and commentary on national events. Finally, the author traces the history of blues documentation, showing how our views of the early blues have been shaped through a complex interplay of social forces and indicating possible lines for future research.

Moanin' Low Ross Laird, 1996-11-25 The first comprehensive guide to pre-1934 female popular vocal recordings sung in English from around the world, and including all styles, this discographical study includes solos, duets, trios, and quartets composed by the great songwriters of the early 1900s, from Irving Berlin to Victor Young. The majority of the listings include material that has not been previously published, and a large number of entries profile such prolific artists as Helen Clark and Gladys Rice, who are not in previous discographies. A special feature includes data on sound-on-disc recording made for early talking picture musical shorts, especially by Vitaphone, that is not documented elsewhere. A comprehensive title index includes composer credits for the majority of the titles listed.

The singing styles include those of cabaret performers, music hall, and vaudeville acts. Songs for the stage, screen, and radio are also included.

Broadcast Blues Eric Burns, 1993 There have been memoirs by television anchorpeople before, there have been intellectual critiques of the medium, but there has never been a book like Broadcast Blues. In this smart, scathing, and very funny account of his years on the air, former NBC News correspondent Eric Burns exposes the distortions and pretensions of television journalism by showing us how it works how what we see on our screens gets there and freely confesses his role in all of it Broadcast Blues records the transformation of a TV obsessed teenager American Bandstand was my homework and I was the most diligent of students into an accomplished journalist with unique qualifications to skewer his profession Burns writes trenchantly of his rapid rise from WNOW TV in Parkersburg West Virginia America s 196th largest market where he fretted about his blinking rate overbite and general appearance so thin that when I wear a bow tie I look like a swizzle stick to his dream job as a correspondent for NBC News where his duties included being the next Charles Kuralt and substituting for the drugged out Jessica Savitch as anchor of NBC News Digest He paints a withering portrait of PBS thought by so many to be the medium s salvation and offers a hilariously revealing account of his stint on Entertainment Tonight prime organ of the celebrity culture As Samuel Johnson might have said when a man knows he is about to interview Molly Ringwald it concentrates his mind wonderfully He is equally perceptive about his own motives and powerfully describes the early life crisis that ultimately led him to see his journalistic self as a three card monte dealer simultaneously delighting and impoverishing the people at home by my clever shuffling of events Unlike other critics of television journalism Eric Burns addresses the issues with the lucidity and sophistication of an insider who made it to the top and walked away African American Music Mellonee V.

Day,2021-01-08 This spirited history of public television offers an insider's account of its topsy-turvy forty-year odyssey. James Day, a founder of San Francisco's KQED and a past president of New York's WNET, provides a vivid and often amusing behind-the-scenes history. Day tells how a program producer desperate to locate a family willing to live with television cameras for seven months borrowed a dime and a suggestion from a blind date and telephoned the Louds of Santa Barbara. The result was the mesmerizing twelve-hour documentary An American Family. Day relates how Big Bird and his friends were created to spice up Sesame Street when test runs showed a flagging interest in the program's live-action segments. And he describes how Frieda Henock, the first woman appointed to the FCC, overpowered the resistance of her male colleagues to lay the foundation for public television. Day identifies the particular forces that have shaped public television and produced a Byzantine bureaucracy kept on a leash by an untrusting Congress with a fragmented leadership that lacks a clearly defined mission in today's multimedia environment. Day calls for a bold rethinking of public television's mission, advocating a system that is adequately funded, independent of government, and capable of countering commercial television's lowest common denominator approach with a full range of substantive programs: comedy as well as culture, entertainment as well as information. This title is part of UC Press's Voices Revived program, which commemorates University of California Press's mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice, reach, and impact. Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893, Voices Revived makes high-quality, peer-reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print-on-demand technology.
