Cadbury Castle Somerset John C Barrett, P W M Freeman, 2014-06-30 Some time late in the first century AD Roman military action took place in the hillfort of Cadbury Castle Somerset The evidence for destruction in the south western gateway includes deposits of fragmentary and partly burnt human remains weaponry and dress fittings After this destruction barracks were built on the hilltop These events effectively brought to an end the history of an indigenous community that for nearly a millennium before had settled within and constructed one of the most impressive hillforts in southern Britain This is a report of the archaeology of that community from its origins in the late Bronze Age to its eclipse in the Roman Iron Age The archaeological deposits are extensive The ramparts and south western gate structure represents one of the deepest and most complex Iron Age stratigraphic sequences excavated in southern Britain and the survival of preserved surface deposits within the interior yielded a remarkable range of metalworking debris and animal burials Consequently this report contains a wealth of detail concerning the material culture of what had been a rich and powerful Iron Age community and its significantly extends our understanding of the nature of hillfort occupation in southern Britain British Archaeological Reports, Past, Present and Future David P. Davison, Martin Henig, 1996 Dress and Society T. F. Martin, R. Weech, 2017-01-31 While traditional studies of dress and jewellery have tended to focus purely on reconstruction or descriptions of style chronology and typology the social context of costume is now a major research area in archaeology This refocusing is largely a result of the close relationship between dress and three currently popular topics identity bodies and material culture Not only does dress constitute an important means by which people integrate and segregate to form group identities but interactions between objects and bodies quintessentially illustrated by dress can also form the basis of much wider symbolic systems Consequently archaeological understandings of clothing shed light on some of the fundamental aspects of society hence our intentionally unconditional title Dress and Society illustrates the range of current archaeological approaches to dress using a number of case studies drawn from prehistoric to post medieval Europe Individually each chapter makes a strong contribution in its own field whether through the discussion of new evidence or new approaches to classic material Presenting the eight papers together creates a strong argument for a theoretically informed and integrated approach to dress as a specific category of archaeological evidence emphasising that the study of dress not only draws openly on other disciplines but is also a sub discipline in its own right However rather than delimiting dress to a specialist area of research we seek to promote it as fundamental to any holistic archaeological understanding of past societies

Fragments of the Bronze Age Matthew G. Knight, 2022-02-03 The destruction and deposition of metalwork is a widely recognised phenomenon across Bronze Age Europe Weapons were decommissioned and thrown into rivers axes were fragmented and piled in hoards and ornaments were crushed contorted and placed in certain landscapes Interpretation of this material is often considered in terms of whether such acts should be considered ritual offerings or functional acts for storing scrapping and recycling the metal This book approaches this debate from a fresh perspective by focusing on how the metalwork was destroyed and deposited as a means to understand the reasons behind the process To achieve this this study draws on experimental archaeology as well as developing a framework for assessing what can be considered deliberate destruction Understanding these processes not only helps us to recognise how destruction happened but also gives us insights into the individuals involved in these practices Through an examination of metalwork from south west Britain it is possible to observe the complexities involved at a localised level in the acts of destruction and deposition as well as how they were linked to people and places This case study is used to consider the social role of destruction and deposition more broadly in the Bronze Age highlighting how it transformed over time and space Excavations at Grimes Graves, Norfolk, 1972-1976: Shaft X, Bronze Age flint, chalk, and metal working Ian H. Longworth, 1991 The Production and Distribution of Metalwork in the Middle Bronze Age in Southern Britain, 1976
