From the Introductory ON the northern shore of Sicily are still to be seen the magnificent remains of a castle which formerly belonged to the noble house of Mazzini It stands in the centre of a small bay and upon a gentle acclivity which on one side slopes towards the sea and on the other rises into an eminence crowned by dark woods The situation is admirably beautiful and picturesque and the ruins have an air of ancient grandeur which contrasted with the present solitude of the scene impresses the traveller with awe and curiosity During my travels abroad I visited this spot As I walked over the loose fragments of stone which lay scattered through the immense area of the fabric and surveyed the sublimity and grandeur of the ruins I recurred by a natural association of ideas to the times when these walls stood proudly in their original splendour when the halls were the scenes of hospitality and festive magnificence and when they resounded with the voices of those whom death had long since swept from the earth Thus said I shall the present generation he who now sinks in misery and he who now swims in pleasure alike pass away and be forgotten My heart swelled with the reflection and as I turned from the scene with a sigh I fixed my eyes upon a friar whose venerable figure gently bending towards the earth formed no uninteresting object in the picture He observed my emotion and as my eye met his shook his head and pointed to the ruin These walls said he were once the seat of luxury and vice They exhibited a singular instance of the retribution of Heaven and were from that period forsaken and abandoned to decay His words excited my curiosity and I enquired further concerning their meaning A solemn history belongs to this castle said he which is too long and intricate for me to relate It is however contained in a manuscript in our library of which I could perhaps procure you a sight A brother of our order a descendant of the noble house of Mazzini collected and recorded the most striking incidents relating to his family and the history thus formed he left as a legacy to our convent If you please we will walk thither I accompanied him to the convent and the friar introduced me to his superior a man of an intelligent mind and benevolent heart with whom I passed some hours in interesting conversation I believe my sentiments pleased him for by his indulgence I was permitted to take abstracts of the history before me which with some further particulars obtained in conversation with the abate I have arranged in the following pages

Excerpts of a review from The Living Age Volume 226 published in 1900 Does any one now read Mrs Radcliffe or am I the only wanderer in her windy corridors listening timidly to groans and hollow voices and shielding the flame of a lamp which I fear will presently flicker out and leave me in darkness After reading with breathless haste through A Sicilian Romance and The Romance of the Forest in a single day it would ill become me to speak lightly of Mrs Radcliffe Like Catherine Morland I love this lady's tender yet terrific fancy Mrs Radcliffe does not always keep on her highest level but we must remember that her last romance The Italian is by far her best She had been feeling her way to this pitch of excellence and when she had attained to it she published no more The reason is uncertain Scott thinks that she may have been annoyed by her imitators or by her critics against whom he defends her in an admirable passage to be cited later Meanwhile let us follow Mrs Radcliffe in her upward course The Sicilian Romance appeared in 1790 when the author's age was twenty six The book has a treble attraction for it contains the germ of Northanger Abbey and the germ of Jane Eyre and the germ of Byron Like Joseph Andrews Northanger Abbey began as a parody of Mrs Radcliffe and developed into a real novel of character So too Byron's gloomy scowling adventures with their darkling past are mere repetitions in rhyme of Mrs Radcliffe's Schedoni This is so obvious that when discussing Mrs Radcliffe's Schedoni Scott adds in a note parallel passages from Byron's Giaour Sir Walter did not mean to mock he merely compared two kindred spirits A Sicilian Romance has its scene in the palace of Ferdinand fifth Marquis of Mazzini on the northern coast of Sicily The time is about 1580 but there is nothing in the manners or costume to indicate that or any other period Such local color was unknown to Mrs Radcliffe as to Clara Reeve Phenomena begin in the first chapter of A Sicilian Romance mysterious lights wander about uninhabited parts of the castle and are vainly investigated by young Ferdinand son of the Marquis Meanwhile Hippolitus the Chaste loved all in vain by the reigning Marchioness is adored by and adores her stepdaughter Julia Jealousy and revenge are clearly indicated But in chasing mysterious lights and figures through mouldering towers Ferdinand gets into the very undesirable position of David Balfour when he climbs in the dark the broken turret stair in his uncle's house of Shaws in Kidnapped Here is a fourth author indebted to Mrs Radcliffe her disciples are Miss Austen Byron Miss Bronte and Mr Louis Stevenson Ferdinand began the ascent He had not proceeded very far when the stones of a step which his foot had just quitted gave way and dragging with them those adjoining formed a chasm in the staircase that terrified even Ferdinand who was left tottering on the suspended half of the steps in momentary expectation of falling to the bottom with the stone on which he rested In the terror which this occasioned he attempted to save himself by catching at a kind of beam which suspended over the stairs when the lamp dropped from his hand and he was left in total darkness Can anything be more amazing horrid above all as there are mysterious figures in and about the tower Mrs Radcliffe s lamps always fall or are blown out in the nick of time an expedient already used by Clara Reeve in that very mild but once popular ghost story The Old English Baron 1777 All authors have such favorite devices and I wonder how many fights Mr Stanley Weyman s heroes have fought from the cellar to their favorite tilting ground the roof of a strange house A Sicilian Romance Ann Radcliffe,2014-04-23 A review from The Monthly Review September 1790 In this tale we meet with something more than the alternate tears and rapture of tender lovers The writer possesses a happy vein of invention and a correctness of taste which enable her to rise above the level of mediocrity Romantic scenes and surprizing events are exhibited in elegant and animated language and from The Critical Review March 1791 This very interesting novel engages the attention in defiance of numerous improbabilities and hair breadth escapes often repeated an experiment that we can scarcely venture to try but with modern novels of the first class We found the tale as we have said very entertaining and involved with art developed with skill and the event concealed with great dexterity If our author again engaged in this task we would advise her not to introduce so many caverns with such peculiar concealments or so many spring locks which open only on one side The Scots Magazine of September 1890 again echoed The Monthly Review its reviews seem to consist of abridgements of those in other magazines A Sicilian Romance it seems attracted some attention other than that of reviewers who read it as a matter of duty Mrs Elizabeth Carter in her Letters to Mrs Montagu writes I have been reading with much pleasure the Sicilian Romance The language is elegant the scenery exquisitely painted the moral good and the conduct and conclusion of the fable I think original Have you read it And do you know the name of the Authoress I do not A Sicilian Romance by Ann Radcliffe, Author of the Romance of the Forest.... Ann Radcliffe,1809 A Sicilian Romance , A Sicilian Romance (Another Leaf Press) Ann Radcliffe,2013-01-03 The classic gothic story by Ann Radcliffe A Sicilian Romance Ann Radcliffe,2013-02-02 The house of Mazzini is troubled stories of strange happenings ignite the countryside At the heart of the growing darkness is a hidden past ancient sins that could destroy a family a family already plagued with the ghosts of their past crimes A Sicilian Romance Ann Radcliffe,2023-01-21 A Sicilian Romance by Ann Radcliffe is a Gothic novel set in the late 16th century on the northern shore of Sicily The story unfolds around the Mazzini family whose castle now in ruins was once a seat of luxury and vice The narrative begins with a traveler who intrigued by the castle s history learns of a manuscript detailing the family s past The tale centers on the Marquis of Mazzini a man of imperious character and his two daughters Emilia and Julia who are raised in seclusion under the care of Madame de Menon The marquis s neglect and the influence of his second wife Maria de Vellorno a woman of artful and volatile nature shape the lives of the daughters The novel explores themes of love mystery and the supernatural as Julia becomes entangled in a series of mysterious events linked to the uninhabited southern part of the castle The appearance of lights and figures in this section of the castle coupled with the dying words of a servant Vincent hint at a dark secret As the story progresses Julia experiences the pangs of first love with Count Hippolitus de Vereza amidst the backdrop of family intrigue and the oppressive influence of the marchioness The novel is a rich tapestry of emotional depth exploring the contrast between the innocence of youth and the corruption of power set against the picturesque yet haunting landscape of Sicily
