Caring Stages

Time to consider:

Can you name the stages of caring?

How would your approach differ for each stage?

What kinds of supports would be best in each stage?

Discuss what you think a carer might be thinking when their partner has just been diagnosed with Schizophrenia. What information might they be seeking? Is it a good idea to link them to a support group with people who have been caring for 20+ years?

Key Tips

Just as people experiencing mental illness may be at different stages of their recovery journey, carers will also vary in their journey. The Carer Lifesource Model is highly useful to consider in your work. The way the carer can assist the client in their recovery is influenced by the by the carer's stage. The type of support the carer requires varies along this journey. A person new to caring will respond very differently to a person who has worked through their own needs and is able to respond to the changing presentations of a mental illness.

These resources are intended to promote discussion and consideration of the ways of working with families and carers in the support of clients. They were developed under the Mental Health Planning function in North Western Melbourne, but should be applicable to many services.
