Collecting Old Lustre Ware W. Bosanko,1916 Some of the brilliant lustres produced by the early Staffordshire potters notably during the Wedgwood period have an exceptional interest and the history of the production of lustre ware at the various centres of potting is as elusive as the rich bloom for which the collector now seeks The absence of historical sequence the paucity both of data and marked examples together with the erratic manner in which the metallic glazes were associated with the pottery and porcelain made in the English factories at the beginning of the nineteenth century and onwards all tend to add fascination to the pursuit of the finer specimens which have survived pg ix Catalogue of English Porcelain, Earthenware, Enamels, Etc Bernard Rackham,Victoria and Albert Museum.
