Benchmarking For Higher Education:

Benchmarking in Higher Education Jeffrey W. Alstete, 1996-06-13 This report concerns the use of benchmarking as a strategy for assessing and improving efficiency and productivity of administrative processes and instructional models in colleges and universities The introductory chapter addresses the need for new tools and strategies to meet the increased competition and the higher demand for accountability faced by institutions of higher education and the development of benchmarking by the Xerox Corporation in the 1980s The second chapter presents various definitions of benchmarking an ongoing systematic process for measuring and comparing the work processes of different organizations by bringing an external focus to internal activities and functions An overview of benchmarking identifies a four step benchmarking process model that includes 1 planning the study 2 conducting the research 3 analyzing the data and 4 adapting the findings to the home institution Four kinds of benchmarking are identified and discussed internal competitive functional industry and generic The third chapter reviews the current uses of benchmarking in higher education as undertaken by such organizations as the National Association of College and University Business Offices the Association for Continuing Higher Education the Graduate Management Admission Council Educational Benchmarking Inc and independent institutions The final chapter gives detailed recommendations and outlines a procedure for institutions interested in undertaking a benchmarking study Contains approximately 115 references PRW

Benchmarking for Higher Education Norman Jackson, Helen Sarah Lund, 2000 Benchmarking for Higher Education provides an holistic view of the application of benchmarking It uses case studies and system wide reviews to show how benchmarking is being used by universities and colleges and by subject and functional communities in the UK and in other higher education systems to aid self regulation and self improvement The book is an important resource for academic and non academic managers in higher education Jacket

Benchmarking in Institutional Research Gary D. Levy, Nicolas A. Valcik, 2012-12-21 While the term benchmarking is commonplace nowadays in institutional research and higher education less common is a solid understanding of what it really means and how it has been and can be used effectively This volume begins by defining benchmarking as a strategic and structured approach whereby an organization compares aspects of its processes and or outcomes to those of another organization or set of organizations to identify opportunities for improvement Building on this definition the chapters provide a brief history of the evolution and emergence of benchmarking in general and in higher education in particular The authors apply benchmarking to Enrollment management and student success Institutional effectiveness The potential economic impact of higher education institutions on their host communities They look at the use of national external survey data in institutional benchmarking and selection of peer institutions introduce multivariate statistical methodologies for guiding that selection and consider a novel application of baseball sabermetric methods The volume offers a solid starting point for those new to benchmarking in higher education and provides examples of current best practices and prospective new directions This is the 156th volume of this Jossey Bass series Always timely and comprehensive New Directions for Institutional Research provides planners and administrators in all types of academic institutions with guidelines in such areas as resource coordination information analysis program evaluation and institutional management Using Benchmarking to Inform Practice in Higher Education Barbara E. Bender, John H. Schuh, 2002-07-08 Declining confidence in the academy combined with increasing scrutiny of higher education by funding agencies legislators and the public is driving academic leaders to better demonstrate the extent to which their colleges and universities are meeting goals Benchmarking a tool that has been used for years in industry is one approach higher education leaders can use to measure the extent to which institutional objectives are being met This volume provides different perspective on the application of benchmarking in higher education The authors present conceptual overviews and organizational examples of how benchmarking can be used in colleges and universities Our expectation is that the reader will develop an appreciation of benchmarking as an administrative tool including a greater awareness of its strengths and limitations Administrators or faculty members in higher education will be able to develop their own strategies for using benchmarking in their practice This is the 118th issue of the Jossey Bass series New Directions for Higher Education Research on Benchmarking in Higher Education Pulatkhon Lutfullayev, 2007 Benchmarking Higher Education System Performance, 2019 The scope of contemporary higher education is wide and concerns about the performance of higher education systems are widespread The number of young people with a higher education qualification is expected to surpass 300 million in OECD and G20 countries by 2030 Higher education systems are faced with challenges that include expanding access containing costs and ensuring the quality and relevance of provision The project on benchmarking higher education system performance provides a comprehensive and empirically rich review of the higher education landscape across OECD countries taking stock of how well they are performing in meeting their education research and engagement responsibilities Benchmarking Higher Education System Performance ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT., Oecd, 2019-06-11 The scope of contemporary higher education is wide and concerns about the performance of higher education systems are widespread The number of young people with a higher education qualification is expected to surpass 300 million in OECD and G20 countries by 2030 Higher education systems are faced with challenges that include expanding access containing costs and ensuring the quality and relevance of provision The project on benchmarking higher education system performance provides a comprehensive and empirically rich review of the higher education landscape across OECD countries taking stock of how well they are performing in meeting their education research and engagement responsibilities Benchmarking in

Gnanam, David Bradbury, Antony Stella, 2003 The world over quality assurance agencies are working towards the same purpose but in different contexts and with consequent variance in their procedures There is a growing fund of experience on various issues of quality and quality assurance to build on but at present it is highly fragmented and well developed only in a few countries and on issues more pressing to the context of those countries Quality in Higher Education K. B. Powar, 2005 With special reference to India Current Problems of University Management Tadeusz Wawak , 2014 The quality of teaching in higher education has been widely discussed for years in Poland and abroad alike As regards our domestic situation the problem has been intensifying since our transformation in 1989 due to the increase in the number of private universities experiencing difficulties in providing adequate academic staff for didactic purposes These types of problems are also noticeable abroad especially in the context of the requirements imposed by the Bologna Process and the recommendations of the European Union That is why an international research project came into being The project was financed by the Department of Applied Economics of the Jagiellonian University and it was joined by universities from the USA Ukraine Russia Algeria Germany and Poland The results of the research carried out under the auspices of Professor Tadeusz Wawak have been presented in the present monograph It can be noticed that the problems which particular universities are struggling with are similar It is also important to say that the completion of the tasks in the scope of pro quality management restructuring at the university demands the implementation of the principles of Total Quality Management Excerpt from the review by Professor Stanisław Tkaczyk The book focuses on the problems of university management The authors of individual chapters are educational researchers from the USA Russia Algeria the Ukraine and Poland Each of them presents problems existing in their own academic environment on the basis of their personal experience Thus the reader is presented with a full range of currently discussed topics by the institutions responsible for the functioning of the system of education They comprise among others New Economy promoting New University the process of globalization and integration the Bologna Process with adjustment to its recommendations and the internationalization of higher education A comprehensive analysis of the condition of the Ukrainian academic education deserves special attention Not only does it describe its present state but it also contains its critical assessment and a series of proposals including the need to implement the necessary structural changes in this area and to create a comprehensive system improving the quality of university management Additionally the book contains descriptions of new technologies and concepts of education which have emerged recently in the context of the required procedural reform as well as interesting research findings carried out among students in Algeria Excerpt from the review by Professor Tadeusz Grabiński
