

A Simple Guide to Office Safety

Office safety, also known as workplace safety, is the practice of ensuring a safe, working environment for employees and visitors. It is both the duty and moral responsibility of every company to promote wellness, and prevent the likelihood of accidents in the workplace which may result in property damage, injuries, or loss of life.

Top 4 Most Overlooked Office Safety Hazards

1 Workstation Ergonomics

Neck strain, back problems, and unwanted weight gain are just some of the problems caused by poor workstation ergonomics. Optimizing your workstation and standing up to stretch every half an hour can help reduce some of these health risks.

2 Trip, slip, and fall hazards

"Same level falls" cost a staggering $7.94 billion in healthcare fees in the US for 2011 alone. Avoid these hazards by having adequate lighting in walkways, taping carpets and cables down, having even walk surfaces, and providing caution or warning signs.

3 Fire Safety

Defective electronics, accidental damage, and employee negligence are common culprits for office fires. Installing fire detection systems, maintaining electrical lines, and making sure fire exits are not obstructed improve your office fire safety.

4 Eye Strain

Refers to red eyes, eye twitching, and overall eye fatigue. Consider wearing computer eyewear, installing an anti-glare screen, and utilizing the "20-20-20 rule" to reduce eye strain when working on a computer.
