Constructing Incompetence:

Constructing (in)competence Dana Kovarsky, Madeline Maxwell, Judith F. Duchan, 2013-06-17 Competence and incompetence are constructs that emerge in the social milieu of everyday life. Individuals are continually making and revising judgments about each other's abilities as they interact. The flexible, situated view of competence conveyed by the research of the authors in this volume is a departure from the way that competence is usually thought about in the fields of communication disabilities and education. In the social constructivist view, competence is not a fixed mass residing within an individual or a fixed judgment defined externally. Rather, it is variable, sensitive to what is going on in the here and now, and coconstructed by those present. Constructions of competence are tied to evaluations implicit in the communication of the participants as well as to explicit evaluations of how things are going. The authors address the social construction of competence in a variety of situations: engaging in therapy for communication and other disorders; working and living with people with disabilities; speaking a second language; living with deafness; and giving and receiving instruction. Their studies focus on adults and children, including those with disabilities: aphasia, traumatic brain injury, augmentative systems users, as they go about managing their lives and identities. They examine the all-important context in which participants make competence judgments, assess the impact of implicit judgments and formal diagnoses, and look at the types of evaluations made during interaction. This book makes an argument all helping professionals need to hear: institutional, clinical, and social practices promoting judgments must be changed to practices that are more positive and empowering.

Scientific Realism in Studies of Reading Alan D. Flurkey, Eric J. Paulson, Kenneth S. Goodman, 2020-08-13 This book provides research-based insights that deepen and broaden current understandings of the nature of reading. Informed by psycholinguistic and sociolinguistic views of reading as meaning construction, the studies build on principles of scientific realism, an approach to inquiry that incorporates and values a wide variety of methods of observation to find the most inclusive, ecologically valid description of the reading process as it is observed in a variety of contexts from a wide range of perspectives. Focusing on how facts are discovered, developed, and used in the construction of knowledge about reading, a data-driven and theory-driven construction that results from observing the reading process with a variety of tools, methods, disciplines, and conceptual frameworks, scientific realism goes beyond rationalism and experimentation to include studies of events and experiences but still satisfies even the most narrow definitions of what state and national lawmakers refer to as reliable and replicable research on reading. Each study in this volume breaks ground for a new line of reading research underpinned by the theory of reading based in scientific realism. Scientific Realism in Studies of Reading is directed to reading researchers, teacher educators, reading specialists, special educators, graduate students, and related education professionals in the disciplines of applied psycholinguistics and sociolinguistics and is appropriate as a text for advanced courses in these areas.
