environmental challenges and social inequalities. Importantly, the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) framework sets a purpose to protect human rights, end poverty, reduce inequality, protect the planet and its natural resources, and enhance sustainable economic growth. Recently, due to the deterioration in global environmental conditions, increasing stakeholder demands, and stricter regulations and laws all over the world, firms have realized the importance of integrating Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) into their strategic orientations in order to enhance their environmental, social performances and keep sustainable development.

Integrating Agriculture, Green Marketing Strategies, and Artificial Intelligence

Garwi, Jabulani, Dzingirai, Mufaro, Masengu, Reason, 2024-12-26. As consumers prioritize sustainability, agricultural producers are seeking new ways to meet this demand through green marketing, which emphasizes the ecological benefits of their products. AI technologies play a crucial role in this integration by optimizing farming operations from precision agriculture that minimizes resource use to data-driven insights that inform marketing strategies. By utilizing AI, farmers can improve crop yields and reduce environmental impact while communicating their sustainability efforts to consumers. This approach supports environmental sustainability and creates a more resilient agricultural sector that aligns with the values of modern consumers. Integrating Agriculture, Green Marketing Strategies, and Artificial Intelligence explores the intersection of agriculture, green marketing strategies, and AI within the context of sustainability. It examines the integration of these diverse domains, providing transformative insights into addressing pressing environmental and social challenges. This book covers topics such as precision agriculture, sustainable development, branding, and marketing, and is a useful resource for data scientists, environmental scientists, business owners, marketers, agriculturalists, academicians, and researchers.

Environment Factor How Influences Consumer Behavior Johnny Ch LOK, 2021-07-05. Why social and physical environmental factors have close relationship to influence economic growth. I shall indicate reasons to explain why social and physical environmental factors have close relationship to influence economic growth, even human health, and quality of life. The social and economic burdens of poor education, lack of affordable housing, and less than self-sufficient income affect not just those individuals and families who have the fewest resources. The social gradient means that not only do those in the bottom worse health outcomes to bottom of income group and the top income group, those will have poor quality of life influence. The higher rates of disease and disability and lesser productivity among many communities means a higher public and private burden of life years, particularly life expectancy, once one reaches age 65. In recent decades, research has increasingly shown how powerfully social and economic conditions determine population health and differences in health among subgroups, much more so than medical care. It seems that environmental factors can influence human's quality of life. Los Angeles County Department of Public Health 2016 indicated a country health rankings model this department explained these three health factors can cause this health outcomes These health factors include health behaviors 30% it includes tobacco use diet and exercise alcohol use unsafe sex clinical care 20% it includes access to care quality of care social and economic factors 40% it includes education employment income family and social support community safety physical environmental factor 10% includes natural environmental quality built environmental quality Then these factors can cause this health outcomes such as morality length of life 50% and morbidity quality of life 50% SO it implies that physical environmental factor can influence human s length of life So on our social environmental problems result is from a complex interplay of a number of forces An individual s health related behaviors particularly diet exercise and smoking surrounding physical environment and health care both access and quality all contribute significantly to how long and how well human live However none of these factors is as important to population health as are the social and economic environments in which human live learn work and play We refer to these factors can be as the social determinants of health to influence our quality of life How do social determinants affect our quality of life In the late 19th and early 20th centuries public health concentrated particularly on the physical environment Improvements in for example clean water supplies healthier housing sanitation workplace safety and safe food lead to sharp increases in average life expectancy Also our quality of life needed to be concentrated on expanded access to medical care resulting in further expansion So the poverty trap is now characterized by those elements such as low levels of i environmental quality ii life expectancy and iii human capital

Russell, 2005 Over the past decade there has been growing interest in the role of information in the promotion of environmentally friendly behaviour This book examines how and why the provision of such information can affect individual decisions concerning buying or consuming a product or valuing a policy The information can take the form of a product label or a statement in a survey questionnaire and the decision can be what product to buy what food to eat or how to answer a contingent valuation question The chapters in this volume carefully explore the explanations for consumer behaviour in different scenarios where information is provided about the public implications of individual decisions The first set of chapters examines the prospects for eco labelling as a tool of environmental policy from a variety of different perspectives They also look at how this form of information provision compares with more familiar policy instruments in achieving efficiency goals In the second and third sections the focus is on environmental and food labelling in which a combination of private and public motives for purchase decisions is found Finally the role of information in contingent valuation surveys is considered in particular the impact of information and time in altering stated value responses Containing both theoretical and empirical research this original volume will appeal to environmental economists researchers and policymakers interested in the role of information provision in economic behaviour and environmental policy

Consumer Behaviors and Economy Relationship Johnny Ch LOK, 2020-03-16 Whether design factor can predict consumer behavior for environment protection product Why environmental pollution and human right abuses has close relationship to influence quality of life and economic growth In fact environment pollution and human right abuses has close relationship It is clear that poverty situations and human rights abuses are worsened by environmental degradation The result can influence poor human quality of life to the developing countries people unfairly There are these several obvious reasons firstly the exhaustion of natural resources leads to unemployment and emigration to cities secondly this affects the enjoyment and exercise of basic human rights Environmental conditions contribute to a large extent to the spread of infectious diseases From the 4 400 million of people who live in developing countries almost 60% lack basic health care services almost a third of these people have no access to safe water supply thirdly degradation poses new problems such as environmental refugees Environmental refugees suffer from significant economic socio cultural and political consequences And fourthly environmental degradation worsens existing problems suffered by developing and developed countries David J Nowak Gordon M Melsler 2016 showed Air pollution for example accounts for 2 7 million to 3 0 million of deaths annually and of these 90% are from developing countries Hence our societies need to concern human right law to protect unfair treatment to developing countries people Firstly both disciplines have deep social root even though human rights law is more rooted within the collective consciousness the accelerated process of environmental degradation is generating a new environmental consciousness Secondly both disciplines have become internationalized The international community has assumed the commitment to observe the realization at human rights and respect for the environment Thirdly both areas of law tend to universalize their object of protection Human rights are presented as universal and the protection of the environment appears as everyone is responsibility Human right and environment law can raise our quality of life because the first approach is one where environmental protection is described as a possible means of fulfilling human rights standards Here environmental law is conceptualized as giving a protection that would help ensure the well being of future generations as well as the survival of those who depend immediately upon natural resources for their livelihood So the end is fulfilling human rights and the route is through environmental law the second approach places the two sphere in inverted positions it states that the legal protection of human rights is an effective means to achieving the ends of conservation and environmental protection Therefore the presently existing human right is as a route to environmental protection The focus is on the connection to influence any economy health food supply housing fresh natural air supply etc aspects of quality of life issues Hence human right and environment law and human quality of life and economic growth has close relationship We can not neglect to concern how to achieve human right law to protect our nature environment existing in our societies What are environmental factors affect human health in important way both positive and negative

Consumerism and Environment Carlo Orecchia, Pietro Zoppoli, 2014 The literature has typically expressed environmental quality as a function of per capita income ignoring the role consumption choices can play as a potential mediating factor between environmental degradation and economic growth Consumption can affect the environment in many ways higher levels of consumption and therefore higher levels of production require larger inputs of energy and material and generate larger quantities of waste by products Increased extraction and exploitation of natural resources accumulation of waste and concentration of pollutants can damage the environment and on the long run limit economic activity Rebus sic stantibus consumerism a term used by sociologists to describe the effects of equating personal happiness with purchasing material possessions can even do worse as long as it determines an increase in the amount of purchased goods The object of this article is to analyse the relationship between consumerism and environment We critically review the empirical findings of the Environmental Kuznets Curve literature according to which an inverted U relationship between environmental degradation and economic growth is observed In particular we focused our attention on consumption based approaches to the income environment relation in order to better identify the impact of consumerism on the environment We finally suggest a possible specification and estimation of a reduced form equation relating several impact indicator to consumption per capita Advances in
