The Psychological Aspect of Shopping Sprees - Knowing about "Shopaholism" Dueep Jyot Singh,John Davidson,2015-12-21 Table of Contents Introduction Psychological Aspect From the Sellers Viewpoint Good Housekeeping Sensible Shopping Tackling That Craving This Is the Last Time Shop Around Window Shopping Shopping with Friends Discount Sales The Credit Card Danger Combating Compulsive Shopping Disorder Easy to Follow Tips Conclusion Author Bio Publisher Introduction What do you mean I shouldn t shop so much This book is going to tell you a little bit about the psychological aspect of one activity which is rather common all over the world This includes spending money often needlessly in buying things which one does not need or want In the 21st century this psychological ailment has been given the name of Shopaholism and people suffering from them are called shopaholics Most of us find this term very amusing and may even laugh at people who splurge without reason and without thinking spending their hard earned money on things just because Most of us enjoy shopping In fact we can think of no other relaxing activity than going out and doing a little window shopping in our favorite stores It is only when we begin to buy everything insight even if we cannot afford it and our credit card is weeping as it sees the limits approaching we may find ourselves in a bit of a quandary Shopping occasionally and within limits can be a very enjoyable experience What is this overwhelming reason why we want to shop In fact a large number of women when asked why they wanted to shop so much say that it gives them a high In fact I was feeling rather blue a couple of days ago and not too well and my mother suggested that I go out in the fresh air and shop to my heart s content I do not like shopping much in fact you can call me a bit of a tight wad But I found that just going in my favorite shops and looking around at the things there and feeling content that I had enough of money to buy them if I wanted to buy them was enough to make me feel better Notice the point here I had enough money to buy the things I wanted or needed and I did not want to buy them For many of us occasionally we do not have that much money with us or on our credit cards However we want to buy and we want to buy right now This is when the problem starts Apart from that artificial high and it being a pleasurable experience and exercise most of us are suffering from the compulsive shopping syndrome This is a real live ailment It turns us into shopaholics In fact Wikipedia calls shopaholics people suffering from a compulsion which makes them want to shop In such cases people do not shop because have to get something They shop because they cannot stop themselves and they are addicted to shopping

Detoxing from Shopping Jacqueline Havelka,2022-09-30 Shopping addiction can be very damaging to one s mental and physical health and one s financial well being A study conducted by university researchers found that 58 percent of compulsive shoppers had large debts 42 percent couldn t make their debt payments 8 percent had financial legal problems and 8 percent had criminal legal problems Detoxing from Shopping is one of eight titles in the Detoxing From series Each title spotlights a major addiction discusses its negative physical and mental effects as well as its effects on family and other loved ones and provides an overview of treatment options for the addiction Profiles of those who are battling addictions are provided to help readers understand that anyone can develop an addiction Readers will learn that addictions can be overcome with the help of therapy drug treatments self help groups support family and friends and other resources
