Initiation and scope definition

Identify stakeholders, objectives for the information technology (IT) project, and prepare a project statement to define the work requirements necessary to meet the project goals. Examine business opportunities and technical parameters for budget, schedule, and risk. Establish budget and completion criteria. Identify key project roles, and gain stakeholder sign-off.

Planning

Define project parameters in more depth, including the project strategy, life cycle, deliverables, and schedule. Conduct a labor resource, and estimate costs to create a budget. Anticipate risks and create a risk management plan. Develop a detailed project plan, including strategies for communication and change management. Before finalizing the plan, incorporate stakeholder expectations and obtain management buy-in.

Execution, control, and coordination

Execute the project plan while controlling costs and the schedule. Coordinate resources and tasks. Monitor and track performance, and analyze performance indicators. When you identify a problem, correct it and implement a change management strategy. Pay close attention to the triple constraint: scope, schedule, and budget.

Closure, acceptance, and support

Define roles to identify and analyze problems with planning, organization, execution, control, execution, and budget. Transfer project deliverables to support and maintenance personnel, and create a help desk. Institute user testing as necessary. Obtain customer sign-off.

Tournament Approaches to Policy Reform

Clifford F. Zinnes, 2010-10-01 While much foreign aid achieves commendable goals some is ineffective In this volume Clifford Zinnes argues that a donor's intrinsic informational limitations on the local context as well as inability to control the progress of interventions mean that lack of success is not rooting in insufficient funding but in maladapted institution designs of interventions that don't foster local ownership He identifies and assesses a newly emerging class of foreign aid delivery that promises to overcome these obstacles The approach is based on prospective inter jurisdictional competition PIJC Beneficiary groups often local level governments supported by their private sector and civil society act as teams and compete against each other under explicit predefined rules and objectives to design and implement interventions under their own aegis to achieve the highest quantitatively measured performance either relative to others tournaments or against a preset benchmark certification Teams that cooperate internally are the likeliest to win the rewards which aside from the longer run benefits of the intervention itself might include more substantive financial or technical assistance from the sponsor Since only groups serious about reforming choose to play Zinnes says the incentives generated by the ensuing race to the top competition create local ownership encouraging recipients to draw on their own knowledge Moreover since all teams that compete and not just those who win donor rewards benefit from their own reform efforts he argues that this approach can leverage aid resources more than a conventional bilateral aid agreement Zinnes presents a dozen recent applications of the approach including those sponsored by the World Bank USAID the United Nations the Ford Foundation and others He also recommends improvements and ways to scale up PIJC based projects in applications ranging from protecting the environment and reducing red tap

Biofuels and the Sustainability Challenge Aziz Elbehri, Anna Segerstedt, Pascal Liu, 2013 Biofuels global emergence in the last two decades is met with increased concerns over climate change and sustainable development This report addresses the core issue of biofuel sustainability of biofuels and related feedstocks drawing from a wide range of sustainability related studies reports policy initiatives The report critically examines the economic environmental and social sustainability dimensions of biofuels and review the major certification initiatives schemes and regulations In doing so the report relies on extensive review of a number of country case studies covering a broad range of current biofuel feedstocks systems The report analysis clearly distinguish feedstock efficiency in terms of biofuel yields per unit of land from sustainability especially under limiting resource irrigated water or sensitive areas carbon stocks Also long run economic viability depend on the future policy support technical innovations in biofuel systems economics of biofuel supply and demand and trade offs between food and energy uses as well as feedstock productivity gains Biofuels can present both advantages and risks for environmental sustainability the latter being often difficult to measure or monitor and may conflict with economic sustainability unless great strides in productivity gains are achieved Social sustainability is the weakest link in current biofuel certification schemes owing to intrinsic local factors and as efforts target more few negative social impacts much less focus is placed on inclusive processes that strengthen marginal stockholders participation and benefits Biofuel certification schemes need to be more smallholder inclusive perhaps through policy initiatives Finally poor developing countries especially with abundant land and biomass production potential need to prioritise food security and poverty reduction In many cases biofuel models that encourage small scale integrated bioenergy systems may offer higher rural development impacts FDI induced larger scale biofuel projects on the other hand may be suitable in those situations where countries have sufficient industrial capacity besides land and biomass potential and when these biofuel projects can be fully integrated into domestic energy strategies that do not conflict with food production potential and food security
