

Levels of Leadership

Army leaders operate at four levels: Self; Team; Organisational; and Strategic. Advancement is usually progressive due to the nature of military rank and promotion. Yet, irrespective of the level, the fundamental principles of leadership endure: it is ultimately human in nature and based on personal interactions with those around us. The skills and competences that allow leaders to thrive at the 'Self' and 'Team' levels are as equally important at the 'Organisational' and 'Strategic' levels.

The Changing Character of Leadership

While the nature of leadership is enduring, its character and the context in which it is being applied changes at each level. This requires leaders to build upon the knowledge and skills already acquired at earlier levels by shifting focus across the different areas of the FLCF as the span of their leadership responsibility and complexity increases.
