

FEMINIST PERSPECTIVES ON THE FAMILY:

LIBERAL FEMINISM:

- Concerned with sex discrimination and equal rights for women's opportunities – e.g equal pay act and end to discrimination in employment.
- They argue women's oppression, gradually overcome – through changing attitudes and changes of laws, such as sex discrimination act (1975), which stops discrimination in the workplace.
- They believe we are moving towards greater equality – if we carry on reforming acts helping women.
- Similar to Young and Wilmott, they believe the family is making gradual progress in the treatment of women.
- For example, some studies suggest men are doing equal work to women in the home now.

Evaluation:

- Liberal feminists fail to address the underlying causes of women's oppression and for believing that simple changes in law, will bring about equality.

MARXIST FEMINISM:

- Marxist feminists argue main cause of women's oppression is capitalism – not men.
- Women's oppression performs 3 functions for capitalism:
  1. Women reproduce the next generation of workers.
  2. Women absorb anger: Ansley (1972) 'Women are the takers of shit' – soak up the feelings of their husbands, who are angry at the system for exploitation.
  3. Women are a reserve army of cheap labour: Employers can pay them whatever they want and employ and fire them whenever they want.
- Marxist feminists argue oppression of women in the family, linked to the exploitation of the W/C.

Evaluation:

- Ignores patriarchal oppression of women in the family – men benefit from women's unpaid domestic labour and sexual services (Radical feminism).
