Reshaping Technical Communication Barbara Mirel, Rachel Spilka, 2002-06-01 This anthology brings together voices from industry and academia in a call for elevating the status identity value and influence of technical communicators Editors Barbara Mirel and Rachel Spilka assert that technical communicators must depart from their traditional roles moving instead in a more influential and expansive direction To help readers explore the possibilities contributions from innovative thinkers and leaders in technical communication propose ways to redefine the field s identity and purposes and to expand the parameters of its work The chapters included here all point toward new directions for greater growth and influence of the field Contributors depart from traditional ideas and solutions and discuss new and in some cases radical points provoking further thought and discussion Its exploration of fresh territory uncovers new research topics and directions and provides an examination of both internal industry academia relationships and external relationships between technical communicators and other professionals In its entirety this collection represents an inclusive vision for the future targeting such wide ranging issues as creating effective professional organizations disseminating research to diverse audiences transitioning to more influential job roles exerting leadership in usability and creating hybrid identities and collaborative programs between industry and academic to support them The diverse voices from industry and academia will inspire readers to think differently about the discipline s identity and direction and to build on the ideas they find herein to effect change within their own spheres As required reading for academics and professionals in technical communication this collection is a critical step in reshaping and reinvigorating the technical communication field to ensure its survival and growth in the 21st century

Molded in the Image of Changing Woman Maureen Trudelle Schwarz,1997-07 What might result from hearing a particular song wearing used clothing or witnessing an accident Ethnographic accounts of the Navajo refer repeatedly to the influences of events on health and well being yet until now no attempt has been made to clarify the Navajo system of rules governing association and effect This book focuses on the complex interweaving of the cosmological social and bodily realms that Navajo people navigate in an effort alternately to control contain or harness the power manifested in various effects Following the Navajo life course from conception to puberty Maureen Trudelle Schwarz explores the complex rules defining who or what can affect what or whom in specific circumstances as a means of determining what these effects tell us about the cultural construction of the human body and personhood for the Navajo Schwarz shows how oral history informs Navajo conceptions of the body and personhood showing how these conceptions are central to an ongoing Navajo identity She treats the vivid narratives of emergence life origins as compressed metaphorical accounts rather than as myth and is thus able to derive from what individual Navajos say about the past their understandings of personhood in a worldview that is actually a viable philosophical system Working with Navajo religious practitioners elders and professional scholars Schwarz has gained from her informants an unusually firm grasp of the Navajo highlighted by the foregrounding of Navajo voices through excerpts of interviews These passages enliven the book and present Schwarz and her Navajo consultants as real multifaceted human beings within the ethnographic context
