Abstract

Increased prevalence of obesity poses a challenge due to the altered physiologic and pharmacokinetic state which renders the patient under general anesthesia susceptible to delayed recovery, increased incidence of hypoxemia, and delayed healing. Smooth conduct of anaesthesia in a differently-abled child with morbid obesity demands meticulous preoperative preparation to ward off separation anxiety from the parents as well as the anxiousness related to the unfamiliar environment.

Keywords: Anxiety, apnea, emotional intelligence, hypoxemia, morbid obesity, obstructive sleep, separation

INTRODUCTION

Obesity is a part of group of noncommunicable diseases called "New World Syndrome."^[1] The World Health Organization defines obesity as body mass index (BMI) (weight in kg/height in meter square) $>30 \text{ kg/m}^2$. Morbidly obese patients are a challenge for every anesthesiologist as they have limited cardiopulmonary reserves, have multiple comorbidities (diabetes mellitus, hypertension, and coronary arterial diseases), suffer from obstructive sleep apnea (OSA)/obesity hypoventilation syndrome, and pose a great difficulty in positioning during surgery and are more prone to injuries/nerve damage. Patients with OSA are associated with twice the incidence of postoperative desaturation, respiratory failure, postoperative cardiac events, and intensive care unit (ICU) admission.^[2] Intellectual disability (ID) with obesity poses as a double challenge for anesthesiologist.^[3] The anesthesia management of ID patients has a dual task of allaying anxiety of patients as well as their parents/caretaker as apprehension of the guardian or parent can significantly affect the patient's behavior.^[4]

CASE REPORT

We present a 15-year-old morbidly obese female patient, a case of multiple caries teeth associated with infection of multiple root canals, for root canal treatment and multiple teeth extractions. The patient was a known case of postscrub typhus sequelae (encephalitis) with reduced higher mental functions and history of tracheostomy with prolonged mechanical ventilation of 2-month duration, about 10 years back. On examination, the patient had a BMI of 55.5 kg/m^2 and was wheelchair bound with fixed flexion deformity of both the hip and knee joints. Airway examination showed reduced mouth opening and severely restricted neck extension, with neck circumference of 48 cm. Mallampati score could not be assessed in view of uncooperative patient. Systemic examination was within normal limits. "Stop bang" questionnaire confirmed obstructive sleep apnea syndrome with the score of 5 in this case. Preoperative sleep studies could not be carried out as facility was not available in our center. She was on tablet eltroxin $125 \mu\text{g}$ and tablet phenytoin sodium 100 mg once daily for last 10 years and on intermittent continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP). Her hematological and biochemical investigations were within normal limits. Surgical procedures as well as technique of anesthesia and associated complications
