Changing Uganda:

Democracy and Political Change in Sub-Saharan Africa John A. Wiseman, 2002-11-01 Since the end of the 1980s the most important political development in Sub Saharan Africa has been the movement towards democracy This is something that has affected nearly all the countries in the region in varying degrees This book provides the reader with a set of case studies covering a diverse range of African states in order to identify the major causes of recent change the progress made so far and what the prospects for the future might be While changes in the global political situation has been important the greatest impetus towards democracy has been the result on internal factors For all the states covered the specific domestic social economic and political conditions are seen as vitally important

Changing Uganda Holger Bernt Hansen, Forskningsrådet for udviklingsforskning (Denmark), 1991 Yoweri Museveni battled to power in 1986 His government has impressed many observers as Uganda s most innovative since it gained independence from Britain in 1962 The Economist recommended it as a model for other African states struggling to develop their resources in the best interests of their peoples But where was change to start At the bottom in building resistance committees or at the top in tough negotiations with the IMF How was it to continue Was it in the restructuring of the national army in increasing respect for human rights in the reform of education in tackling AIDS or in getting Ugandans to speak a common language Was it in building more viable survival strategies for the poorest Ugandans or in restructuring the national constitution The last five years have shown a radical approach to Uganda s dilemmas Holger Bernt Hansen and Michael Twaddle previously edited Uganda Now It was brought together at a significant moment just as President Museveni was gaining power in 1985 6 It was so much in demand that it even entered the magendo market on the streets of Kampala The book which is still in print was described by The Canadian Journal of African Studies as virtually a mini encyclopedia of Uganda and by The African Studies Review as the best overview of Uganda s trauma in the last two decades The editors have assembled another team of Ugandan and international scholars to review the dilemmas of introducing revolutionary changes in an African country deeply affected by structural adjustment plans which have been imposed from outside

Museveni's Long March from Guerrilla to Statesman Ondoga ori Amaza, 1998 The author joined Yowerri Museveni s rebel army in 1982 and was subsequently a member of the Constituent Assembly which produced Uganda's constitution. Published posthumously, the book tells the inside story of a truly successful revolution and the rise to power of President Museveni. He provides a detailed account of the overthrow of Milton Obote's oppressive regime and the military dictatorship of General Tito Okello. He explains how Museveni and the National Resistance Army were able to gain power in Uganda by principled leadership and a national programme that has eschewed sectarianism and factionalism to facilitate a lasting and prosperous peace in what is now one of the fastest growing economies in Africa.

Changing Patterns of Relationship Between Indian and African Communities in East Africa Suraiya Tabassum Rehman, 2006
Women & Politics in Uganda Aili Mari Tripp, 2000
Uganda has attracted much attention and political visibility for its significant economic recovery after a catastrophic decline. In her groundbreaking book Aili Mari Tripp provides extensive data and analysis of patterns of political behavior and institutions by focusing on the unique success of indigenous women's organizations. Tripp explores why the women's movement grew so dramatically in such a short time after the National Resistance Movement took over in 1986. Unlike many African countries where organizations and institutions are controlled by a ruling party or regime, the Ugandan women's movement gained its momentum by remaining autonomous.

The impact of environmental and climate change on Seasonal Wetlands. The Busingo Wetland in Mayuge district Kisira Yeeko, 2017-11-30
Bachelor Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject Geography Earth Science Geology Mineralogy Soil Science Makerere University College of Agriculture and Environmental sciences course Bachelor of Arts Geography Major language English abstract
The study focused on examining the impacts of environmental change on the water potential of Busingo wetland water resources in Mayuge District. The data analyzed from the study were based on objectives and research questions. These were to identify the major climate change impacts in the region to identify the major causes of wetland degradation, identify the forms of wetland degradation and to examine the influence of climate change impacts on wetland water resources. Data was collected in all the three parishes using systematic random sampling among the farmers. Observation and use of transect walks across the wetland were the major ways of data collection where two plots of 200m one within the wetland and one on the flanking hill. A random sample of 25 respondents was selected for interview purposes. It was mainly found out that the environmental change impacts involved both the climate change and all the land degradation processes that threaten the existence of water resources in the wetland, which is increasingly becoming a threat in the area. In conclusion, environmental change impacts cause wetland degradation and water storage capacity in the region as per the analysis Therefore the establishment of a broad network comprised of wetland scientists climate change scientists economists the public agricultural community land use planners and policy makers This is the one of main suggested solutions to the problem since it can create routes through which information and research results are communicated regularly as observed in chapter five
