Changing Global Environment:

Understanding the Global Environment Samir Dasgupta, 2009 Globalization is often discussed in terms of its ecological ramifications. Yet while ecological imbalance is today one of the greatest threats to mankind, globalization is also a reality that is here to stay. The volume therefore seeks to address how globalizing and environmental interests can be reconciled. The essays in this volume state that globalization can work both in favour of and against the environment. The major issues discussed in this topical volume are how globalization can be used to promote environmental reforms, the role of individuals, private organizations and governments in keeping environmental degradation in check and in promoting environmental reform, globalization and ecological inequality, women, the environment and globalization, changing nature of environmental movements, overpopulation and the ecology, the relation between the ecology and the economy and the effects of global climate changes.

Changing the Global Environment Daniel B. Botkin, 1989 In the last human generation we have learned that life existed on our earth for more than three billion years, yet man has done more to change the earth and its ability to support life in the last few centuries than preceding life forms have over hundreds of millions of years. And nearly all of these changes were brought about as unforeseen or unconsidered side effects of our technologies. The editors of this book feel that rather than accepting environmental degradation as the wages of progress, today we are seeing a more widely accepted idea that concern for the environment is simply good economics and planning. In a series of essays written by environmental, economic and social scientists from around the world, Changing the Global Environment looks at the ecological problems facing us as we move into the next century and examines possible solutions suggested by such new techniques as remote sensing and the implementation of worldwide computer based data systems.

The Changing Global Environment S.F. Singer, 2012-12-06 We know a great deal about historical climate and its variations from various geological studies. There are two points worth remarking on. One is that the climate changes frequently and radically, but that the degree of variation and even sense of variation depends on the time scale which we are considering. Secondly, that this is a most unusual geological period for the Planet Earth: we are living in a period of mountain building and glaciations, whereas during most of the last 250 million years, there was little ice and little topography. A good view of climate change of the last hundred million years can be gained by looking at the paper of Kellogg. We are now in a period of extensive glaciations. The previous interval occurred 300 to 250 million years ago when even the Sahara was glaciated. Of course it was at that time near the position of the South Pole we know that 300 million years ago the continents had not broken apart and formed one land mass. Apparently between 250 and 20 million years ago there was little ice on the Earth, even at Antarctica. Continental basins were flooded by shallow seas. This was the period when plant life and marine life proliferated and when most of our fossil fuels were laid down.
