Anvil Clock Last:

Anvil, Clock & Last Paulette Roeske, 2001 Beginning with its opening poem Geode in which we see a young girl smashing open rocks with a hammer Anvil Clock Last announces a preoccupation with explosions These works point to the early experiences that shape our lives and initiate the lifelong struggle between memory and forgetting They are also poems of mortality that focus on death and the line of descent Some poems consider unconscious childhood explorations and what we learn from them and others grapple with a daughter's loss of a father to Alzheimer's disease Roeske uses the anvil the clock and the last as metaphors for the tools with which she forges poems and in doing so hammers out and cracks open the details of her life Chats on Old Clocks Arthur Hayden, 1918 A Dictionary of Sexual Language and Imagery in Shakespearean and Stuart Literature Gordon Williams, 2001-09-13 Providing an alphabetical listing of sexual language and locution in 16th and 17th century English this book draws especially on the more immediate literary modes the theatre broadside ballads newsbooks and pamphlets The aim is to assist the reader of Shakespearean and Stuart literature to identify metaphors and elucidate meanings and more broadly to chart through illustrative quotation shifting and recurrent linguistic patterns Linguistic habit is closely bound up with the ideas and assumptions of a period and the figurative language of sexuality across this period is highly illuminating of socio cultural change as well as linguistic development Thus the entries offer as much to those concerned with social history and the history of ideas as to the reader of Shakespeare or Dryden
