The Apple House Gillian Campbell, 2012-09-04 Anglophone Imogene Jackson grew up in an English suburb on the uneasy edge of a francophone world At the age of nineteen she quit college to marry a shoemaker from the close knit French village of Saint Ange du Lac For ten years she has lived with her husband Thomas above his family s historic shoe shop immersed in village life When Thomas dies in a car accident she is shattered and her hard won mastery of the French language deserts her Isolated and grief stricken she retreats to her childhood home There she discovers that a petty drug dealer she knows from the village has rented a ramshackle farmhouse nicknamed the Apple House at the corner of her parents street and befriended her easily influenced brother Petey Her childhood obsession with the old house resurfaces and she finds herself confronting events from both her recent and more distant past as her two worlds collide Set in 1970s Quebec and written with a gentle humour The Apple House is an intimate portrait of life during a time of great change Refrigerated
