Abstract

Much development has been so far observed in the role of artificial intelligence applications in media. We in this research made an attempt to predict the future impact of these applications on media. To this end, interviews were conducted with several university professors, asking them about their opinions in this regard. We asked them several questions (e.g. How can we describe artificial intelligence applications in media? Are they a new form of media with old technology, a new form of media with new technology, or a new form of media with old technology?). We reached several results, the most important are that transformations will occur to artificial intelligence applications in the future. Recommendations have also been discussed.

Keyword: Artificial intelligence applications; media; communication; technology.

1. Introduction

The Fourth Industrial Revolution, which produced the artificial intelligence applications, combines all areas of real life with the digital systems. As a result, unlimited capabilities are produced that help gather and implement tasks based on some information and a huge amount of data in a flow manner and across different networks. Various artificial intelligence applications perform tasks more accurately and faster than human mind. Using these applications in the field of health, education, and economic management has notched up
