Cultural Resources Law Enforcement, 1980 Cultural Resources - Law Enforcement U. S. Department of Agriculture Forest S, Dee F. Green, 2002-12-01 America's cultural heritage spans the ages from at least 20 000 years B C to the present time Much of this rich and varied resource is found on the National Forests It is nonrenewable fragile and often highly visible Artifacts and evidence of that heritage are being destroyed by a class of citizen who out of inadvertence curiosity or greed persists in vandalizing this part of our history for selfish purposes Loss of our link with the past through vandalism theft or other destructive acts is a crime against all Americans Prepared in 1981 by the Southwestern Region of the United States Forest Service this volume covers laws and regulations criminal case background papers texts of actual court documents and case preparation aids Archeological Protection Training for Cultural Resources and Law Enforcement Managers and Specialists, 1989* Cultural Resource Laws and Practice Thomas F. King, 2004 Renowned cultural resource management consultant Thomas F King demystifies this web of regulations surrounding this field providing frank practical advice on how to ensure regulatory compliance in dealing with archaeological sites historic buildings urban districts sacred sites and objects shipwrecks and archives In this new edition King reports on changes in cultural resource laws regulations and executive orders in the past five years and adds material on Section 106 review NEPA and the Preserve America executive order Canyons of the Ancients National Monument (N.M.), Resource Management Plan, 2009

Cultural Resource/Law Enforcement Training [workshop] United States. Bureau of Land Management. California Desert District, 1981 Cultural Resource Protectors Chester Allan Schmidt, 1994 There is a widespread problem with looting and vandalism of cultural resources in the Pacific Northwest To combat this problem law enforcement must have the assistance of the archaeological community To be able to assist law enforcement archaeologists and cultural resource specialists must have the proper training in cultural resource law and crime prevention The focus of this study is to investigate the preparedness of archaeologists and cultural resource specialists within the federal government specifically the United State Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management to assist in the investigation and prevention of cultural resource crime To answer this question a survey was sent out to all of the aforementioned subjects within the Pacific Northwest This survey asked for data concerning types of cultural resources affected by crime prevention methods training opinions on quality of training and demographic information The respondent was also asked to reply to various fictitious scenarios concerning cultural resource crime and the answers compared to a control group made up of law enforcement personnel Information obtained from this survey showed that there is a lack of training among both of these agencies A large percentage of the respondents feel that their training was either nonexistent or was lacking in depth and quality The ability of the subject group to make decisions concerning the fictitious scenarios was closely analogous to those made by the law enforcement group However from information obtained from the respondents and from analysis of other data these scenarios may not have been a good indicator of the preparedness of the subject group To improve their abilities at preventing and assisting in the investigation of cultural resource crimes all archaeologists and cultural resource specialists need to have the opportunity to have access to quality training These persons must also take it upon themselves to protect the resource using methods that are allowed by their respective agencies
