Cultural Politics Of Markets:

The Cultural Politics of Markets Katharine N. Rankin, 2004 I know of no other book which so effectively addresses the question of culture and development in the contemporary global scene and speaks to both planners and anthropologists alike David Holmberg Cornell University An outstanding study of the impact of economic liberalisation in Nepali society Professor John Harriss Director of the Development Studies Institute London School of Economics With this careful unpacking of the neo liberal tenet that market access equals social opportunity Katharine Rankin makes a significant contribution to the vibrant growth of new research Katherine Gibson The Australian National University A classic study of the interaction between market and non market relations Ben Fine Professor of Economics School of Oriental and African Studies University of London This book is a study of the social embeddedness of markets in an era when the ideology of the free market governs development as much as trade Using a wide theoretical framework that encompasses both anthropology and geography Katharine Rankin critiques neoliberal approaches to development showing that the capitalist market will always be linked to local social structures and cultures of value Market led development therefore does not necessarily expand opportunity rather it can deepen existing injustice and inequality Using the example of a traditional Newar market town located in the Kathmandu Valley in Nepal Rankin explores how the value ascribed to social prestige relates to economic opportunity Showing how those in subordinate social locations are positioned to critique inequality Rankin argues that planners should pursue progressive notions of development that recognise the critical resources within culture

The Cultural Politics of Markets Katharine N. Rankin, 2004-01-01 In a neoliberal era when the ideology of the free market governs community development as much as international trade a conflict between capital and tradition is inevitable Issues such as the value ascribed to honour and social prestige are difficult to negotiate with economic opportunity Using the example of a traditional Nepalese market town Katharine Neilson Rankin explores how economic liberalization has blended with local cultures of value Utilizing the ethnographic method of anthropology and the comparative and normative thrust of geography Rankin undertakes a critique of neoliberal approaches to development She demonstrates how market led development does not expand opportunity but rather deepens existing injustice and inequality which is further exacerbated by planners eager to implement market led approaches relying on naively idealistic notions of social capital to expand poor people's access to the market The Cultural Politics of Markets makes a clear case for a strategic merger between anthropological and planning perspectives in thinking about the issue of market transformation

The Cultural Politics of Markets Katharine Neilson Rankin, 2004-04-20 International markets have emerged as the favoured way of achieving not only economic growth and efficiency but also political freedom and social justice This book is a study of the social embeddedness of markets in an era when the ideology of the free market governs development as much as trade Using a wide theoretical framework that encompasses both anthropology and geography Katharine Rankin critiques neoliberal approaches to development showing that the capitalist market will always be linked to local social structures and cultures of value Market led development therefore does not necessarily expand opportunity rather it can deepen existing unjust and inequality Using the example of a traditional Newar market town located in the Kathmandu Valley in Nepal Rankin explores how the value ascribed to social prestige relates to economic opportunity Showing how those in subordinate social locations are positioned to critique inequality Rankin argues that planners should pursue progressive notions of development that recognise the critical resources within culture

Art and the Challenge of Markets Volume 1 Victoria D. Alexander, Samuli Hägg, Simo Häyrynen, Erkki Sevänen, 2018-01-16 Art and the Challenge of Markets Volumes 1 2 examine the politics of art and culture in light of the profound changes that have taken place in the world order since the 1980s and 1990s The contributors explore how in these two decades the neoliberal or market based model of capitalism started to spread from the economic realm to other areas of society As a result many aspects of contemporary Western societies increasingly function in the same way as the private enterprise sector under traditional market capitalism The first volume of this two volume collection considers a broad range of national cultural policies from European and North American countries and examines the strengthening of international and transnational art worlds in music visual arts film and television The chapters cover cultural policy and political culture in the United States United Kingdom Germany France Switzerland the Nordic countries the Balkans and Slovenia and address the extent to which Western nations have shifted from welfare state to market based ideologies Tensions between centres and peripheries in global art worlds are considered as well as complex interactions between nations and international and transnational art worlds and regional variations in the audiovisual market Both volumes provide students and scholars across a range of disciplines with an incisive comparative overview of the politics of art and culture and national international and transnational art worlds in contemporary capitalism

The Cultural Politics of Markets: Economic Liberalization and the Challenge for Social Planning in Nepal Katharine Neilson Rankin, 1999 This dissertation considers the potential for politically progressive responses within the state to the contemporary neoliberal orthodoxy and related processes of economic globalization It focuses specifically on recent initiatives in Nepal to temper the pace of economic liberalization with financial regulations promoting the so called microcredit model of rural finance In order to evaluate the potential of this model to provide social opportunities for its target population of poor rural women the dissertation first considers the configuration of interests underlying the simultaneous engendering and marketization of development embedded in this strategy as well as the key assumptions within it about the causes of poverty the role of markets and the nature of community The bulk of the dissertation is then devoted to bringing ethnographic analysis of a local cultural economy the Newar merchant community of Sankhu to bear on these assumptions with special emphasis on the perspectives of low castes and women and on the articulation of macroeconomic trends with local cultural contexts The emphasis on subaltern perspectives is intended ultimately to illuminate the resources for social criticism available within culture and to demonstrate how planners might learn to recognize them

Markets are usually discussed in abstract terms as an economic organizing principle a generalized alternative to government planning or even as powerful actors in their own right able to shape local and national economic destinies But markets are not abstract Even as the idea of the market seduces politicians around the world to take advantage of their abstract qualities they constantly run up against material reality Markets are always somewhere in place and it is in place that the smooth theories of markets falter and fail More than simply being embedded in particular places markets necessarily emerge in the various political social cultural and environmental relations that exist in and between places Markets shape places but the reverse is also true This collection of essays approaches markets from the ground up and from a part of the world often still regarded as peripheral to global capitalism the South Pacific With a wide variety of case studies including on indigenous economies childcare agriculture wine electricity metering finance education and housing the authors show how complex local social and cultural politics matter to how markets are made within and between places and the insights that can be gleaned from studying markets in this part of the world They explore the way superficially similar markets work out differently in different places and why as well as examining how market relations are constructed in places outside and on the edges of the centres of Western capitalism and what this says back to how markets are understood in those centres The book will be of particular interest to scholars and students working in and between economic geography cultural economy political economy economic sociology and more
