Curators And Culture The Museum Movement In America 1740 1870:

Curators and Culture Joel J. Orosz, 2002-06-28 The author researched ten museums founded prior to 1870 using primary sources Those chosen comprised a geographically diverse sample of pre 1870 American museums and covered a range of disciplines among them art history and natural science Museums in Motion Edward P. Alexander, Mary Alexander, 2008 In 1979 Edward P Alexander's Museums in Motion was hailed as a much needed addition to the museum literature In combining the history of museums since the eighteenth century with a detailed examination of the function of museums and museum workers in modern society it served as an essential resource for those seeking to enter to the museum profession and for established professionals looking for an expanded understanding of their own discipline Now Mary Alexander has produced a newly revised edition of the classic text bringing it the twenty first century with coverage of emerging trends resources and challenges New material also includes a discussion of the children's museum as a distinct type of institution and an exploration of the role computers play in both outreach and traditional in person visits Curators and Culture Joel J. Orosz, 1986 The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum Brian Young, 2000-05-18 Museums and cultural institutions across North America and Europe are being transformed by budget cuts re evaluation of their cultural missions evolving concepts of museology and changing audiences making Brian Young's trenchant history of a prestigious university museum Montreal's McCord Museum of Canadian History especially pertinent In The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum Young elucidates the relationship between museums and communities by examining the nineteenth century social context of the family who bequeathed their collection to McGill University and the collection's fate in an academic institution Tracing the museum's history from its founding by David Ross McCord he emphasizes the centrality of elite women to the culture of the museum and its survival in the twentieth century the museum's importance as the collective memory of Montreal's English speaking elite and the difficulty academic historians have had in dealing with material history He recounts a sorry tale of mismatched institutional and intellectual cultures that culminated in the university's transfer of custodial responsibility to a corporate museum board and the collapse of the museum's central research and conservation mandates The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum reveals the complex and often conflicting relationships between private collectors curators museum and university officials volunteers researchers philanthropic foundations the state and the public It shows how the makeup interests and perspectives of these groups have changed over the course of the century leading to the current crisis in which many museums are forced to function according to a corporate culture in which the dictates of audience size marketing and public relations experts dominate the priorities of curators and collections the needs of scholars and students and the interests of communities Young exposes the present day conflict between cultural institutions operating ahistorically and often without any social vision and a public demanding greater help in understanding the past It will be of interest to everyone who cares about culture museums and public memory Curators and Culture Joel

J. Orosz, 1990 Covers the transplanting of the curiosity cabinet to the New World the museum of respectability and of enlightenment Discusses the age of egalitarianism and the compromise or synthesis of popular education and professionalism

Life on Display Karen A. Rader, Victoria E. M. Cain, 2014-10-03 Life on Display traces the history of biological exhibits in American museums to demonstrate how science museums have shaped and been shaped by understandings of science and public education in twentieth century society Karen Rader and Victoria Cain document how public natural history and science museums ongoing efforts to create popular educational displays led these institutions to develop new identities ones that changed their positions in both twentieth century science and American culture They describe how pre 1945 biological exhibitions changed dramatically from rows upon rows of specimen collections to large scale dioramas with push button displays as museums attempted to negotiate the changing and often conflicting interests of scientists educators and the public The authors then reveal how from the 1950s through the 1980s museum staffs experimented with wildly different definitions of life science and life science education and how in the process natural history and science museums and science centers faced significant public and scientific scrutiny The book concludes with a discussion of the ways corporate sponsorship and contemporary blockbuster economics influenced the content and display of science and natural history museums in the century s last decades As a dynamic historical account of how museums negotiated their multiple roles in science and society Life on Display will attract a diverse audience of cultural historians sociologists and ethnographers of science as well as museum practitioners
